THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION.

VOL. XVII. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 5 1884. TWELVE PAGES. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

EXPOSING BLAINE.

A SHARP TRICK OF THE OHIO DEMOCRATS.

They Hire a Column in the Commercial Gazette and Ventilate the Mulligan Letters—Mr. Blaine Assists to Protect Himself from Further Assaults of the Kind—What Halsted Says.

NEW YORK, October 4.—The Times Cincinnati special, dated yesterday, says: "Much comment was caused to-day in political circles, by the appearance on 5th page of the Commercial Gazette, of a column of matter, fiercely denouncing Blaine. The column was headed in heavy Brick letters: "The Independent Republicans." The second heading, in small letters, was as follows: "New Journalistic Enterprises—The Independents Hire a Column of the Commercial Gazette. What the Mulligan Letters Are—How They Come Out." The Times special describes and quotes at some length the matter printed in this leased column, and then proceeds to say that the republicans were amazed at its appearance, and it is said that one of the local leaders of the party telegraphed to Halstead, in New York, to ask what it meant and why it was permitted. The column fell under Blaine's eye, and it comes pretty direct that he felt it keenly, and asked if it could not be stopped. On change it was all the talk. The democrats laughed over it, and the republicans confessed their surprise that so thorough a Blaine organ as the Commercial-Gazette should have admitted such a matter to its columns at any time, much less on the morning of the demonstration in Blaine's honor. It would destroy their half advantage which the party had derived from Blaine's visit. It is explained at the Commercial Gazette office that the matter was admitted by the business department and did not fall under the editorial supervision, and that there will be no more of it.

WHAT THE MOVEMENT MEANS.

The Times Star correspondent has this interview with the gentleman who edited the matter which appeared to-day. His name is not given but it is understood to be Lawrence Maxwell, an attorney at law.

"It is purely a local movement," he said. "The gentlemen who called on Schurz are the only ones interested. They have assumed the expense and have appointed a committee to furnish the copy."

"Then there will be a series of articles?"

"Yes; there will be one every day."

"For how long?"

"I don't know exactly, possibly until the election are over."

"Is the expensive is it not?"

"Certainly, I am not at liberty to say what the expense is, as a private contract has been made with the Commercial Gazette."

"Who composes the committee that is to furnish the copy?"

"I do not feel at liberty to state just now. I don't know that they would object to it being known but I am not authorized to mention any names. There is not a great deal of writing to be done any how. It is more of a compilation of quotations. We feel that the Mulligan letters have never been brought fully before the public, and by publishing them in the Commercial Gazette they will reach a class of people who would not see or understand them otherwise."

"Do you expect any good result from these publications?"

"Oh, yes, or we would not go to so much trouble and expense."

Blaine's Trip Through Ohio.

PIQUA, O., October 4.—Mr. Blaine and party left Columbus by a special train on the Baltimore and Ohio road at 9:30 this morning. The first stop was at Newark, where they were loudly cheered, and at the courthouse made a speech. At the Zanesville depot the jam was so great that the party had difficulty in getting to their carriages. They were escorted to the stand by an escort of plumed knights. Ten thousand persons were so densely packed around the stand that two or three speakers were unable to reach it. After the outburst of wild cheering subsided, an Irishman shouted, "A thousand welcomes Mr. Blaine, a thousand welcomes." The party stopped at Cambridge, Barnesville, and two or three other points, reaching Bellaire at dark. The little town was all and the buildings on the principal streets were illuminated with Chinese lanterns. Mr. Blaine addressed the crowd from the top of the stairs to the hotel.

Hendricks in Wheeling.

WHEELING, W. Va., October 4.—Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks arrived in this city this morning, and after he had breakfasted, an informal reception was tendered him and Messrs. Randall and Fellows, who accompanied him. Many prominent democrats of the city and state called to pay their respects. At 11 a. m., an industrial display, and parade of marching clubs, the largest single demonstration seen in this city during this campaign, moved over the principal streets. The city was gaily decorated, and Hendricks was repeatedly cheered along the route of march. About 5,000 strangers are in the city. In the evening Colonel John R. Fellowes spoke at the capitol square before a large audience. The torchlight demonstration, which took place this evening, has never been equaled in this city. Mr. Hendricks reviewed the procession from the west porch of the capitol building, and afterward made some brief remarks, which were loudly cheered.

Governor Cleveland's Return Home.

ALBANY, N. Y., October 4.—Governor Cleveland, accompanied by Hon. Erastus Corning, Simon W. Rosendale, Major Banks and John A. McCaull, Jr., arrived from Buffalo at 8:40 a. m., having left this city at 11:30 last night. On account of the hour there were no demonstrations en route. On their arrival the party at once drove to the executive chamber where breakfast was partaken of. At ten o'clock Governor Cleveland was at his desk at the executive chamber.

Hendricks in Another Accident.

WHEELING, W. Va., October 4.—The special train on the Pan-Handle road, carrying Thomas A. Hendricks, collided with a hand car this morning at daylight, and John Ferriz, a boy of twelve years, and Thomas Walton, trackman, were killed. The Plumed Knights, from this city, were also in the train. No one on the train was injured. A heavy fog prevailing at the time caused the accident.

Receivers' Powers Extended.

PHILADELPHIA, October 4.—Upon application of New York creditors, Judge McKennan, of the United States court, to-day appointed Richard S. Newcomb and James G. Smith receivers of the Bankers and Merchants' telegraph company. This action is in effect an extension of the jurisdiction of these gentlemen, as they have already been appointed by the New York court. The amount of their security was fixed at $50,000. Plaintiffs claim is upon two notes for $30,000 each, given by the company to Edwin Middleton, of this city.

A South Carolina Murderer.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., October 4.—[Special.]—Sheriff Holman, of Henry county, South Carolina, passed through the city to-day, having in custody John Winston, colored, whom he arrested in Texas a few days since. Winston is wanted for the crime of murder and arson committed fourteen years ago. He is now 70 years old and his form is bent and disrepid.

Cincinnati Jewelers Assigning.

CINCINNATI, October 4.—Gustav Fox, dealer in diamonds, has made an assignment to Abram Stratuss, with liabilities estimated at $30,000. Fox says his assets will enable him to pay all in full. Emil Dalheimer, jeweler, has made an assignment to L. Kramer, with preferences amounting to $9,000. His liabilities are $40,000; assets $30,000.

THE GROWING COTTON.

The Drouth General—Lowering the Condition.

NEW ORLEANS, October 4.—The following is a summary of the cotton crop report of the National Cotton Exchange for the month of September. The great heat of September and the small rainfall has been unfavorable for the cotton crop, and the effect has forced a lowering in its condition to 75 against 80 for August, 87 for July, 85 for June and 84 for May. From one extreme of the cotton belt to the other a drought may be said to have prevailed, and the natural result of shedding has been general. The weather has proven, however, unusually fine for picking, and as many correspondents say, labor is working hard to gather and save the crop. As a general thing the cotton growth is a good one, but the middle crop is only moderate, and the top crop very poor.

In many portions of several states ginning had not commenced up to the date of the advices received, while in other sections, with continued dry weather, a comparatively early cessation of picking is predicted, at any time running from the middle to the close of October. In Louisiana the reports found a proportionate yield of lint to seed. The average condition of the crop by states is as follows: Virginia 80, North Carolina 80, South Carolina 81, Florida 78, Georgia 80, Alabama 70, Mississippi 75, Louisiana 78, Texas 65, Arkansas 80 and Tennessee 82.

CAUGHT AT THE CUSTOM HOUSE.

A London Jeweler's Detection in the New York Customhouse.

NEW YORK, October 4.—Among the passengers landed at the large office yesterday from the steamship America, of the National line, were Mr. Jas. Graves and his wife. Mr. Graves is a member of the firm of Fox Bros., jewelers, 12 Maiden Lane. He made oath to his declaration, in which only a few dutiable articles of small value were among his baggage, and was about to leave the custombouse. The inspector insisted on making a more thorough search of his baggage. He indignantly protested that he had no other dutiable articles, and when the inspector still insisted he fell to the floor in a faint. Unset stones to the value of $20,000 were found concealed about their persons. Graves was held for examination to-day.

Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, October 4.—The weekly statement of the associated banks shows the following changes:

The National Bank of Mexico.

CITY OF MEXICO, October 4.—The national bank, having been collecting satisfactorily 15 per cent of the revenues to apply on government's accounts at the bank, and having received a second installment of interest on loan of $10,000,000, has given assurances to the government of an advance sufficient for the needs of the outgoing administration.

Mills Shutting Down.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., October 4.—The mills of R. & B. B. Knitt, at Natick, and of the Quidnick manufacturing company, of Quidnick, print cloths, have shut down for two weeks.

Failure in Eau Clair.

EAU CLAIR, Wis., October 4.—Flushard & McEachron, grocers, failed. Liabilities $25,000; nominal assets $35,000.

A Whole Family Murdered.

OMAHA, Neb., October 4.—A special to the Republican tells of the murder of Harry Purceval, his wife, infant child, and a young man living on a neighboring farm, about 10 miles west of Fullerton, in Ponce county, Nebraska. The mother and child were murdered in bed, the father was found beside a hay stack with two bullets in his body, and his body partially consumed by hogs, and the young man was shot in bed. Purceval's house had been robbed of everything of value in money and jewelry, except his wife's watch. The deeds are supposed to have been committed by the farm hand and his partner, both of whom are missing.

Crushed by a Barrel.

CHATTANOOGA, October 4.—[Special.]—Lindsey Estes, a drayman employed by the Chess-Carley oil company, met with a terrible accident to-day, which will cost him his life. He was engaged in rolling a large barrel of oil into his dray from the rear end. By some means he lost his hold and fell backwards to the ground. The barrel rolled the entire length of his body, crushing it in a terrible manner. His right leg and four ribs were broken. Death is inevitable.

Shot Through the Head.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., October 4.—[Special.]—Frank Lambert, the leading merchant at Middleton, Tenn., on the Memphis and Charleston railroad, shot himself through the head this morning. The wound proved fatal in one hour. No cause can be assigned for the act. Lambert held a responsible position with the Memphis road, which he resigned to embark in his present business. He is reputed to have been very wealthy.

A Convicted Prisoner's Desperation.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., October 4.—[Special.]—Ben Benson, convicted on Thursday at the Chilton county court, at Clanton, of murder, and sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary, attempted suicide in the Chilton county jail yesterday by cutting his throat with a pocket knife. His brother, who was visiting him in jail at the time, at once gave the alarm. Medical aid being summoned the wound was pronounced not fatal. Benson's defense was insanity.

Held for Forgery.

FREEHOLD, N. J., October 4.—Frank Patterson, manager of the Asbury Park opera house, was arrested to-day and brought before Monmouth county court on a charge of forging the endorsements of Wm. W. Conever and Judge Samuel T. Henderson, both of Red Bank, on notes aggregating over $10,000. Patterson was bailed in the sum of $5,000.

The Dull Cotton Trade.

MONTREAL, October 4.—Owing to the dullness of the cotton trade, the Hudson mill has further reduced its production by fifty looms, and a large number of hands have been dismissed. The mill has $250,000 worth of white cottons on hand, enough to supply all Canada for six months.

Blown to Shreds.

CINCINNATI, O., October 4.—John Goodwin, an employee of Diehl & Johnson's fire works manufactory, was blown to shreds this morning by the ignition of a motor full of explosive substance, which he was mixing.

Frank Hatton Reappointed.

WASHINGTON, October 4.—The president has designated First Assistant Postmaster General Frank Hatton to act as Postmaster general for ten days.

The Fall of a Stand.

ALMONTE, Ont., October 4.—The balcony on the eastern side of the Lanark agricultural society building here fell yesterday, with a crash of owing to the large crowd standing upon it. A stampede immediately occurred in which many persons were badly crushed.

A Steam Gin Burned.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., October 4.—[Special.]—C. W. Joseph, in this county, lost his steam gin and grist mill by fire early this morning. The loss over two thousand dollors; insurance thirteen hundred.

THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

THE QUESTION OF ITS FURTHER TOLERATION DEBATED.

Mr. Forster Addresses An Immense Audience of Englishmen—The French in China. The Cholera Epidemic. Austria to Absorb Herzegovina, Other News, Etc.

LONDON, October 4.—The usual Saturday meetings were held to-day by the liberals and conservatives throughout the kingdom for and against the franchise bill. The marquis of Hartington, secretary of state for war, addressed 15,000 liberals at Arrington. He said that sending the Gordon relief expedition did not mean the reconquest of the Soudan, but was for the rescue, if necessary, of a grand soldier, patriot, and philanthropist, who had undertaken without material support, to deliver the Soudanese from bondage. He declared that it was as natural for the conservatives to lodge a carfully considered indictment as it was for himself to give a complete defense of the liberal policy in every part of the world; but he would say that during the present government of England, great and enormous difficulties had arisen that were not their own creation, but were a conservative legacy. The policy of the government in Egypt was to withdraw as soon as possible, consistent with the duty of the government, to Egypt and other countries. Franchise agitation might lead to a crisis involving the existence of the house of lords. He said that Mr. Gladstone, of all men, was able and willing to pass the redistribution bill after the franchise bill had been passed.

At Leeds, Rt. Hon. Wm. E. Forster, member of the house of commons for Brantford, delivered a lengthy and eloquent speech in vindication of Mr. Gladstone's policy. He argued that the liberals had not yet agreed among themselves whether the house of lords should be improved or removed, but the people were agreed that they would not be decided, controlled or baffled by a handful of hereditary hangers on. The question is, said Mr. Forster, whether their affairs shall be managed or policy ruled and their will constantly balked, baffled, thwarted and defeated by some three hundred privileged families.

Bombarding Kelung.

PARIS, October 4.—Advices have been received here from Hong Kong, of to-day's date. They contain information that Admiral Courbet began the bombardment of the forts at Kelung on Wednesday. The Chinese offered lively resistance. The French loss on the morning of Wednesday was two men killed, ten wounded.

PARIS, October 4.—Admiral Courbet has telegraphed from Kelung, under date of yesterday, as follows:

"I commenced operations against Kelung on Wednesday, by occupying the height of St. Clement. The Chinese forces, after a fairly warm engagement, evacuated two of their works westward of the height, which we afterwards occupied. I am now fortifying them, and shall operate on Saturday against their works eastward of the height. Our loss was four killed, one missing, thirteen wounded. The Chinese loss is estimated at eighty to one hundred killed, two hundred to three hundred wounded. Admiral Lespes commenced an attack upon Tamsin Thursday, and will occupy that port if possible.

The Gould Cables Broken.

LONDON, October 4.—Both the Gould cables between Europe and America are broken. It is supposed here that the break in the Gould cables is near Cornwall strait, and that the ship's anchor caused the accident. Information received at the Western Union office, New York, is quite at variance with the facts as reported to them, and that both American or Gould cables are broken about 700 miles from Nova Scotia. They are informed that the steamer Faraday is in that vicinity, grappling for the Bennett cable, and surmise that she may have accidentally fouled the American cables, and severed them. They say that this accident leaves the pool six cables, and that under the pooling arrangement the Western Union pool of the American cable company will receive its full proportion of the pool's earnings, the same as if the wires were in operation.

Denounced as Heretical.

ROME, October 4.—The cardinal vicar has pronounced as heretical the congregation of St. Paul's Catholic American church here. The founders of the church are Signor Campbell, former canon of the Roman Catholic church, and Monsignor Savarese. The vicar's reasons for denouncing the church are that it uses the Italian language in conducting its services; impugns the infallability of the pope; sympathizes with Pere Hyacinthe; disbelieves in the real presence; and refuses to invoke the Virgin. The decree denounces with major excommunication all persons who join or persuade others to join the church.

The English Cabinet Called.

LONDON, October 4.—A fresh summons was issued to-day for a meeting of the cabinet Monday next, instead of Tuesday, which was the date fixed upon yesterday. The relations between England and the other powers on the Egyptian question are of such urgent character as to require prompt consideration by the cabinet.

The compromise negotiations between Princes Lansdowne and Earl Salisbury, in relation to the passage of the franchise bill by the house of lords, have terminated in a rupture. Mr. Gladstone absolutely refused to entertain the proposition to introduce the redistribution bill in the house of commons before the house of lords should pass the franchise bill.

The Burning of the Danish Palace.

COPENHAGEN, October 4.—The fire which destroyed the royal palace here last night, and which spread to other buildings, was got under control at 1:30 o'clock this morning. The archieves of the rigsdag and a number of important works of art, including some by Thorwaldsen, were destroyed. The damage amounts to several million kroners. The palace chapel and Thorwaldsen's museum were saved. The king and crown prince were present at the fire until midnight.

Ten soldiers were burned to death while attempting to save some of the effects in the royal palace.

Salisbury in Glasgow.

GLASGOW, October 4.—The marquis of Salisbury, conservative leader in the house of lords, addressed a meeting of members of that party here last eve. He said that the present state of affairs in Ireland is due to Gladstone's zigzag policy of extreme leniency and savagery. All the European power, he stated, are united against England. The Egyptian dilemma was not due to the fulfillment of Lord Beaconsfield's engagement, but to the procastinating policy of the liberals. Lord Randolph Churchill addressed a meeting of conservatives at Leeds last night.

An Encounter in Tonquin.

LONDON, October 4.—Advices from Hanoi, under the date of to-day, state the gunboats Musquiton, Massue and Hache, while cruising in advance of a party which was reconnoitering in the valley of Lockion were attacked by Chinese regulars. One French officer was killed and thirty men were wounded. Reinforcements have already arrived at the scene of the encounter, and others, under command of General Neagrier have left Hanoi.

Explanations to England.

PARIS, October 4.—Prime Minister Ferry, in his note to the French embassy, explaining the measures adopted by France for the safety of foreigners in China, says Admiral Courbet was instructed at the beginning of the war not to injure the foreign concessions. The note concludes with assurances of France's solicitude for the interest of English commerce.

A Town in Distress.

LONDON, October 3.—Many complaints of distress have been received from Spezzia because of the cholera cordon which has caused the town to fill with paupers. The town authorities borrowed a large sum of money, which they intended to use in improving the trade of the place, but it was all spent in defraying the expenses incurred through the epidemic. The town will require relief from the national government.

Pillagers in Egypt.

ALEXANDRIA, October 4.—The merchants and bankers of this city have presented a memorial to the government, asking that vigorous measures be adopted to suppress the brigands, who are securing the provinces, pillaging property and firing upon the people.

An Engagement in Tonquin.

PARIS, October 4.—General De Lisle sends a dispatch stating that, hearing that the Chinese troops between Bacle and Langson were moving forward, he took measures necessary to drive them back into their gunboats. A brilliant engagement ensued. 4,000 Chinese troops being pitted against 1,m. Commander Challe, of Massue, was killed in the fight. When the dispatch was sent the Chinese were steadily being driven back, and had lost heavily their number.

The Duke of Cambridge in Ireland.

LONDON, October 4.—The object of the visit of the duke of Cambridge to Dublin is to decide upon the differences that have arisen between Earl Spencer, lord lieutenant of Ireland, and Sir Thomas Steele, commander in chief of the troops in Ireland, upon the question of maintaining the present strength of the army in Ireland. The duke of Cambridge sustains the views of Earl Spencer, who is in favor of maintaining the army at its present strength.

PARIS, October 4.—Clemencau and Foquet, upon the meeting of the chamber of deputies, will ask the ministry to explain what truth there may be in the current reports of the establishment of new relations between Germany and France. The members of the extreme left will vindicate the necessity of France being in accord with England.

The Garmoyle Suit Ended.

DUBLIN, October 4.—Report is published here that the Garmoyle-Fortescue case has been finally settled. Miss Fortiscue receives $125,000 and surrenders the letters in her possession, including those of Lord Cairns. Lord Garmoyle refused to submit to cross examinations by Counselor Russell.

Not Afraid of Dynamite.

LONDON, October 4.—The rumors which had gained currency that the ministers, on returning to London to attend a meeting, would be accompanied by special guards, are unfounded. The dynamite scare has entirely subsided, and there is an absence of any fear on that account.

The Copyright Congress.

BRUSSELS, October 4.—The copyright congress closed its session. Before adjourning, it passed a resolution that publication and reproduction of musical works should have same protection as literary and artistic work, and that art ought not to be impeded in its progress by custom's formalities.

An Austrian Grab.

ST. PETERSBURG, October 4.—The Russey, a slavophilist organ, states that at the recent meeting of the three emperors at Skiernivice, a proposal was adopted, at the instance of Prince Bismarck, to permit Austria to annex Bosnia and Herzegovina without Russia or Germany protesting.

The Moon's Eclipse.

LONDON, October 4.—The total eclipse of the moon was perfectly observed here to-night. The sky was cloudless throughout the time of observation.

Matters on the Isthmus.

PANAMA, October 4.—A quarantine has been established at Aspinwall against the cholera ports, and the French steamer which arrived Monday last was the first vessel subject to its regulations. The canal company has but a hulk, and on this a lazaretto will be established, and it is supposed the work will soon be commenced in Panama bay. M. de Lesseps is expected here in January, and it is hoped that his visit, combined with the floating of the new loan in Paris by the company, will make things quite lively on the Isthmus.

Inundations in the Argentine Republic.

BUENOS AYRES, October 4.—There have been great inundations in the Argentine Republic. Many towns have been entirely cut off for eleven days. The damage was enormous. Entire families have been drowned. Many are dying of hunger. The farmers have suffered great losses. Railroads are interrupted in some places.

INTO NEW QUARTERS.

The City Officers to Move Next Week Into the New Quarters.

To-morrow night the last session of the city council will be held in the old city hall building. On Tuesday morning the city officers will begin to move into their new quarters in the chamber of commerce building. They will occupy the first floor of that structure and will have seven rooms beside the council chamber, which is larger than the present chamber. This suit of rooms will be the handsomest quarters the city has ever had. It is supposed the city will get moved in about a week or ten days.

The building is nearly finished. The window sash are all in, and the workmen will be hanging the doors to-morrow. It is said to be the best building ever constructed in Atlanta for the money it cost. It is now receiving what could be called the finishing touches and Mr. Cottingham, secretary of the chamber of commerce, who has worked so hard on the enterprise, is about to see it brought to a successful end. The chamber of commerce will occupy the second floor and the Commercial club will occupy the third floor. The fourth floor and the basement are yet to be rented. The building contains almost exactly a million brick; it will not miss it fifty.

THE MAHER CHARGES.

The Matter to Come to the Attention of the City Council To-Morrow Night.

The meeting of the city council to-morrow night will be one of more than usual interest. The charges against Mr. Mike Maher and the other members of the street commission will be brought to the attention of the body. Exactly what shape the matter will take is not known. Mayor Goodwin has received from Mr. Maher a letter asking for a full investigation of his acts as street commissioner. Several members of the city council intended to prefer charges, but under this state of affairs it is not known how the council will act. No evidence under oath can be taken unless the investigation is official. It may be that articles of impeachment will be preferred. In that event a great deal of testimony will be taken. There are several members of the council who feel greatly outraged because the commission has run such an independent schedule. They are ready to see Mr. Maher fully investigated. On the other hand, Mr. Maher is defiant, and if he is pushed may make some changes that will embarrass those who seek to down him.

A POLITICAL PIE.

IN WHICH VARIOUS POLITICAL TOPICS ARE DISHED.

Handy on Ohio—The Republican Factions—Has Arthur Joined a New Party?—Candidate Elsworth So Claims—Something About the American Political Alliance.

PHILADELPHIA, October 4.—[Special.]—It is in this, the strongest republican city of the United States, that the plans of the leaders of the Blaine canvass are being matured. It is here that Blaine's hippodroming tour to the grave of his beloved Garfield was matured, and it is here, in the center of stalwartism that bulletins of his progress are received daily.

The battle now is being fought in Ohio. Although, he is now the edititor and chief and guiding spirit of a new paper of his own, the Daily News, Mr. M. P. Handy is still closer perhaps to the inner councils of both parties than any other editor of the country. He said to-day to THE CONSTITUTION correspondent: "The contest in Ohio is desperate. The democrats have about as much chance of carrying Ohio as the republicans have of carrying West Virginia." The fight over Ohio has never been as tremendous as now. The democratic organization is far reaching and vigorous. The republican leaders of the nation are on the field of battle. If the republicans carry it in October by 20,000 or more, the result will go far towards assuring a republican triumph throughout the country in November."

Nearly every leading newspaper in the east has a staff correspondent now on the great October battle-ground. The news of the day is the news from Ohio. West Virginia is considered only incidentally. The republicans do now and have all all along practically conceded West Virginia to the democrney, but in the last few days private advices received by leading stalwarts of Philadelphia show that every republican caravan to Ohio makes a way-station in West Virginia, and that a very large slice of the tremendous corruption fund which Don Cameron is now and has been attempting to raise since Blaine's visit to the Quaker city, is to be expended among the coal miners on the banks of the Kanawha.

THE REPUBLICAN FACTIONS.

The result of the elections in the October states will test the accuracy of the claims now so blatantly made, that the stalwarts have fallen cordially into line for Blaine. Everybody asks who is to be the next Senator from Pennsylvania? Is Don Cameron to succeed himself? The republicans of all factions freely declare, that he will and that the whole power and prestige of the stalwarts is now being cast into the trembling balance, on the Blaine side. "Look at what Cameron and Grant did, and and what they say for Blaine," is heard in the lobbies and street corners. There does not appear to be any very satisfying answer, however, to the question as to what Arthur is doing or will do for his party's candidate. The president of the United States is not interesting himself in this presidential election at all events.

Indeed, Candidate William L. Ellsworth, who claims to be the chosen representative of the American political alliance for the presidency, and who has headquarters in this city, intimates that "Chester A. Arthur, ex-collector of the port of New York," is a supporter of Ellsworth. This astounding statement cannot be confirmed, because Mr. Ellsworth's headquarters are migratory, and because the assiduous attention of several inquisitive deputy sheriffs have rendered Mr. Ellsworth more of a name than a local habitation. It is actually a fact that this same Ellsworth, who was an officer in the union army, and who once received a nomination for congress in the interior of the state of New York, claims to be the choice of a half million voters for the presidency of the United States. He says, when he can be found, that there are 500,000 regularly registered members of the American political alliance, the direct descendant and representative of the old "know nothing party."

It is not known with what degree of cordiality James G. Blaine, the fat-headed and ultra-corrupt republican candidate regards the claims of this rival to the support of his ancient friends, the knownothings. It is positively known that Blaine has in private boasted of his identification with the knownothing organization thirty years ago. A private letter received here by a friend of Colonel Harris, of Cleveland, O., the alleged Arthur Fanuum of the "Bread Winners," throws a singular and shameful light on the orgies which took place at the stag dinner given Mr. Blaine in Cleveland, when the circus stopped over in that city a few days ago. It is said the candidate of the republican party on that occasion boasted, after the sixth course of wine—there were thirteen varieties of wine served—that he had belonged in his life-time to every political organization now in existence.

MCCULLOUGH'S MISFORTUNE.

The excitement of this political campaign is believed by many to have had a good deal to do with the dethronement of John McCullough, the stalwart chief of the American tragic stage. Poor McCullough! His name is in everybody's mouth here now. Here he began life as a poor "supe," when Forrest played at the Arch street theater; here he earned $2 a week carrying a Roman banner displaying the legend, "S. P. Q. R." Here he married the wife who now sadly awaits his home coming to her humble home on Thompson street, who has ever been the faithful partner of his poverty and his riches, and who is the fond mother of his son and daughter.

John McCullough began life here as a stoker in the gas works. He married while in this humble stage of life. His sister has lived in Philadelphia many years, and never goes or has gone to the theater except when "John" played. He always sent her tickets for every one of his performances. McCullough made his reputation in the old California theater, San Francisco, backed by Ralston, president of the Bank of California, with a million dollars. McCullough made a reputation, and money came. He bought the theater, but before the title was passed to him Ralston committed suicide and the theater was seized by Ralston's creditors.

Fatally Injured.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., October 4.—[Special.]—Thomas Casey, a well to do farmer of this county, met with a terrible accident to-night. He had been in the city all day, and when he started home in a wagon he was very drunk. The team ran away, throwing him out, and the wagon passed over his breast, crushing it terribly. Casey's injuries are fatal.

Fire in Longview.

LONGVIEW, Texas, October 4.—The planing mill and adjoining lumber yard, the property of W. A. Robinson, was burned to-day. Loss $24,000.

Eclipse of The Moon.

About half past 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon when the sun had gotten comfortably in his western bed, the moon, which was well up in the eastern sky, was partially eclipsed for about twenty minutes. The earth's shadow obscured a considerable portion of the silvery disc and marred its proportions severely. Gradually the shadow drew nearer to the sun and at last disappeared entirely, leaving the great luminary of night in the very perfection of full orbed brilliancy. It atoned for its brief eclipse by the bright and mellow beauty which it afterwards gave to the night.

RECEPTION LAST NIGHT

Tendered by the Ladies of Trinity Church to Miss Laura A. Haygood.

At the parsonage of Trinity church last night there was a delightful social gathering. The occasion was a reception given in honor of Miss Laura A. Haygood by the ladies of the church, who desired to meet her in this way before her departure for China. The parlors of the parsonage were filled with ladies and gentlemen and Sunday school children who joined in this general tribute of the church to one of its most beloved members. Miss Haygood received her friends in the front parlor, every one in the large assemblage coming up to shake hands with her. Doctor and Mrs. Kendall made every body feel at home and contributed in every way possible to the pleasure of their guests. Among those present was Mrs. Young J. Allen, wife of Dr. Allen, now well known as a successful Christian worker in China. A telegram was received from Rev. Weyman H. Potter, D. D., expressing his regrets that he could not be present in body as he was in spirit. The hours passed most pleasantly away. The dining room offered a variety of refreshments, and presented one of the attract

The National Campaign Fund.

Every democrat in Georgia is earnestly requested to contribute to the fund for the national campaign. There is immediate and pressing need for money for the legitimate expenses of the canvass. Whatever is to be given should be given promptly. No contribution, however small, will be declined. By this means substantial aid will be given to the cause of honest government, which is so essential to the happiness and property of the south as well as the north.

The Election in Burke.

WAYNESBORO, October 4.—[Special.]—The regular nominees, Judge T. J. McElmurry for senator, R. O. Lovett, Alexander Lively and Justin B. Heath were declared elected by the managers today over S. I. Heath, candidate for senator, and Dr. E. A. Perkins, Thos. B. Cox and Frank L. Brinson. The senatorial majority being much larger than that of the representatives; the latter being thirty-three votes only in majority between the two highest votes on the two sides. A brass band, with general rejoicing among the organized democracy, is in progress to-night. The vote being so close, a contest of the representatives' election is declared. Party spirit has been for some time deeply aroused, and great feeling has been present. At the Alexander precinct a negro got into a difficulty with a white gentleman on the grounds, and was shot twice—once in the hand and a slight flesh wound in the leg. And at another precinct a negro is said to have been beaten and made to level the grounds at the election precinct. One of the managers reported at the consolidation to-day that the lights went out and the ballot box mysteriously disappeared. This precinct gave a majority for the conservative democracy, and consequently were thrown out with two others that went in their favor because the election was said to be unfairly held. It is sincerely hoped that all differences will be amicably adjusted and that good feeling will be restored among our citizens. The breach is as wide as ever and much excitement prevailed throughout the county. Time will no doubt cause all differences to be somewhat forgotten and peace and friendship in a degree will be restored and quiet will once again reign.

The New Representative from Talbot.

TALBOTTON, Ga., October 4.—[Special.]—Captain Roland M. Willis, Talbot's representative just elect, will take his place, that he is justly entitled to by his intellect and ability, as one of the leaders in the next house. Captain Willis was captain of the first volunteer cavalry company from this county in the late war. He was in Wheeler's cavalry. He is about 46 years old, and a lawyer of standing second to none in the Chattahoochee circuit and a man of sterling integrity. He represented this county in the house in 1865 and 1875. You many know that Talbot county appreciate Captain Willis, as he was nominated and elected without opposition, the only time a representative was ever nominated and elected without opposition.

The New South Changes Hands.

ELBERTON, Ga., September 4.—[Special.]—Messrs. W. O. Butler and John H. Grogan have purchased the New South. The paper will be edited by Mr. Butler and Mr. Manley Grogan.

The Cumberland Presbyterians.

ADAIRSVILLE, Ga., October 4.—[Special]—The annual Presbytery, of the Cumberland Presbyterians, is in session at Bartow church, near here A large attendance of clergymen from Tennessee and north Georgia is present.

An Escaped Prisoner's Return.

CONYERS, Ga., October 4.—[Special.]—Geo. Jones, who escaped from the sheriff day before yesterday while under guard at the courthouse, returned last night, his fine in the meantime having been paid. He thought he had to go to jail and pay the fine too, so he skipped.

On the Way to Canada.

CEDARTOWN, Ga., October 4.—[Special.]—Mr. J. F. Goode, conductor on the East and West railroad, left this p. m., to attend the Railroad Conductors' Life association of the United States and Canadas, which convenes in Toronto, Canada, on the 8th inst., and at Cartersville will be joined by Mr. Dick Hargis, who goes as one of the representatives of the Western and Atlantic railroad.

Adjusting a Loss.

TALBOTTON, Ga., October 4.—[Special.]—Mr. J. B. Cobb, of the insurance firm of Cobb, Wilson & Cabaniss, of Macon, Ga., came over to-day to adjust the loss on J. T. Smith's steam gin that was burned on the 19th of September. The insurance was in the Western, of Toronto, Canada. The adjustment was satisfatory to both parties, and Mr. Cobb gave a check for the amount of the loss, $665.11.

Brunswick's Artesian Well.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., October 4.—[Special]—President Brush, of the Manhattan artesian well company, of New York, gave us a flow of forty gallons to the minute, with a thirty-two feet rise, at a depth of 3135½ feet. The pipe is six inches in diameter. The water is strongly impregnated with sulphur, and is clear as crystal.

The Arrival of Lieutenant Rafferty.

DAHLONEGA, Ga., October 4.—[Special.]—Lieutenant Rafferty, First U. S. artillery, reached here last evening from San Francisco to take his position in the North Georgia Agricultural college as professor and commandant of cadets. He was given a salute by the college artillery. Some fine instruments for the engineer department of the college have just been ordered from Philadelphia. No sickness this fall, so far.

Sparta Personals.

SPARTA, Ga., October 4.—[Special.]—Mr. John Graves, of Jacksonville, who some years ago married Miss Mattie Simpson, of this county, is here with his wife on a short visit to her relatives.

Mr. Robert Pierce, of Augusta, arrived in Sparta yesterday; called here to see his mother, who is quite sick.

Miss May Price, of Atlanta, has come to Sparta to assist her sister, Miss Fannie Price, in her business as a milliner and mantuamaker.

Hunting a Horse Thief.

ATHENS, GA., October 4.—[Special.]—A posse of men from Walton county pursued a horse thief over into Oconee county, near Judge Payne's house. The thief climbed a tree to escape his pursuers. He soon found that they would catch him in the tree and leaped out. Several shots were fired at him, but none took effect. The thief made for a swamp near by, and the posse surrounded it. The thief ran out by one of the posse, who commenced firing at him, but none hit him. The thief is still at large.

The Revenue Men in Washington County.

SANDERSVILLE, Ga., October 4.—[Special.]—United States [revenue officials continue to make arrest in our county for alleged violation of the internal revenue laws. The informers and witnesses for the government are generally without character or conscience. Racy developments may be expected in the famous Amason conspiracy case now pending in the United States court from this county—if it ever comes to trial. There are many who believe that Amason shot himself—there is a circumstance pointing this way.

A Notable Place.

SANDERSVILLE, Ga., October 4.—[Special.]—Miss Bessie Warthen, daughter of Elijah Warthen, of Warthen, in this county, noted for her beauty, modesty and sprightliness, returned yesterday to the Southern female college, LaGrange, where she enters on her senior course. Washington county will hereafter, as she has hitherto done, patronize liberally the Southern female college.

Warthen is the precinct that gave one hundred and eleven solid votes to the tegular democratic candidates in the late election, "Chicagoing" the independents. No county in Georgia will have abler representatives in the next legislature than old Washington. Colonels Hines and Pringle are both men of character and ability, and either would fill the speaker's chair with credit. They are men, "every inch of them."

THE CONSTITUTION may expect an increase in its circulation in this county soon.

SHORT TALK WITH THE SCRIBES OF THE COUNTY PRESS.

Burning of a Gin house Near Washington—A Negro Woman Attempts Suicide—A Schoolboy's Letter—Extraordinary Cotton Picking by Children—Other Items of Interest.

About four hundred members have been added to the Methodist church in the Griffin district during the present year.

There is a cat in McDonough whose age is known to be not less than fifteen years, and he is a good mouser now.

Says the Athens Banner: There is a man in Athens who always buys the cheapest goods and shoes for his wife, while he clothes another woman in the finest fabrics and she wears $5 button gaiters. The grand jury should look after such cases as this.

The residence of Dr. E. L. Sander, who lives about five miles from Antioch, was consumed by fire last Friday night, together with all its contents.

W. B. Collins, of Oglethorpe reports that some incendiary is burning the fences in that county.

Crawford Monitor: Emerline White, colored, of this place, decided last Saturday, after having a little trouble with her lover, that she had enough of this world's pleasures; so she obtained from the drug store, a vial of laudanum of which she freely drank until death almost relieved her of her troubles. Drs. Moore and Little attended her and with proper remedies, soon had her on the road to recovery.

A writer in the Cherokee Advance says:

Ball Ground has in two years increased in population about 50 per cent. There are now 300 inhabitants inside the corporation. There are 58 dwellings; 11 storehouses; one Methodist church to be built soon; two church houses; the Baptist church has built up a membership of about a hundred; the Methodist church has increased about one hundred per cent. Each in less than two years. One schoolhouse, with a regular attendance of 130 students, as compared with 25 two years ago; there is one depot; three blacksmith and one wagon shop; first-rate opening for another; one brickyard; six house carpenters; two doctors; one hotel; one livery stable; three preachers; two shoe-shops; one furniture store; two steam sawmills; 1 steam flouring and corn mill; 2 shingle saws; 2 planers; steam gins; a good cotton market; plenty of good clever citizens; about a dozen good looking young ladies with room for good many more. Ball Ground is surrounded on three sides by a number one farming country. These farmers have not until recently had a home market for their produce, now they are waking up to their needs of improved methods of farming, to the comfort and economy of having better houses, better stock and of having their stock housed and cared for. With a prospect of another railroad at no very distant future day, we have bright hope for the future of Ball Ground.

Mr. Brewer Pope, of Wilkes, has lost 30,000 feet of lumber by fire.

Union county has not a single bar room or distillery within her limits.

Washington, Wilkes county, expects to take in about 15,000 bales of cotton this season.

Mr. W. A. Burdett, of Wilkes, has a natural curiosity on his Fishing creek plantation. A large oak tree has covered a radius of five or six feet in every direction around it, with its roots, the roots have solidified and are now covered with one solid stretch of bark.

The Washington Gazette now comes out in eight page form. It always has been one of the most enterprising papers in Georgia, and is brimful of the news of its territory. It is a correct index of the prosperity of Wilkes county.

Washington Gazette: Mr. A. A. Neal, who lives down on Broad river, lost his gin house by fire last Sunday morning. The fire began while the people were at church near by, and as there had been no fire for two days about the steam engine which runs the gin, and as the engine house was not burned, it is thought an incendiary certainly did the burning. The gin house, gin, press and eight bales of unpacked cotton were a complete loss. A grist mill and the engine house, which were in close proximity, did not burn. The same engine was used for running the mill and the gin, but the gin house was as far off as convenient, and connected by shafting. Some negroes saw a negro man run off from the gin house about the time the fire was discovered, and dogs were procured and put on the track, but they ran it only a short distance.

The Warrenton Clipper says:

Some of the congregation at the Baptist church on Sunday evening complain of being disturbed by parties eating groundpeas during services. The offenders were not aware, doubtless, that their conduct was annoying, and this reminder, we dare say, will be sufficient to prevent a repetition of the act.

George Merrell in Haralson Banner: Are all children blockheads? or is it confined to my family? or is it because I don't have any better sense than to tell mine? My little boy wrote his first letter the other day; it was as follows:

"Dear Cousin: I am going to school now. My teacher is the hardest woman to get along with I ever saw except pa. Write soon.

Your Cousin Willie.

It was written on a postal card. He then put a two-cent stamp on it, and then canceled the stamp himself. It discourages me a little, but I take heart when I remember that when Sir Isaac Newton had a fine house built he ordered the workmen to cut a big hole for the old cat to go in and out at, and then re instructed them to cut a smaller one for the kitten.

The Dodge County Journal is warning the church going people against going to sleep while down on their knees at prayer, saying that "it looks somewhat ludicrous to rise excitedly from your knees long after the minister and congregation have arisen."

W. H. Nally, of Douglas, had 1,574 pounds of cotton picked from the field last Monday September 29th, by his five children. The eldest a boy 16 years old, picked 402; daughter 15 years old, 306; second son, 14 years old, 405; third son, 12 years old, 305; fourth boy, 10 years old, 151.

The Conyers Crank Adjudged Insane.

CONYERS, Ga., October 4.—[Special.]—The jury impanelled to try Tom Marston, who burned the Methodist church to the ground, and attempted to burn some other churches and houses in this town, retired at 9 o'clock last night to make up their verdict. The case was conducted with marked ability by the lawyers on both sides. Messrs. Gleaton, McCalla and Perry for the defense, and the solicitor (our Emmett), and Colonel Barton for the state. At half-past eleven the jury filed into the court-room, and amid breathless silence, the foreman read out: "We the jury find for the defendent, on the plea of insanity." With rueful faces and feelings of disappointment the crowd withdrew. They had hoped the law would shield them from the torch of the incendiary, but instead the jury had rendered a verdict in the face of the culprit's own statement, the law and the testimony. Marston, by order of court, goes to the lunatic asylum. If he is not watched closer than Hill he will play them the slip.

A HORRIBLE CRIME.

Pursuing the Ravisher of an Eight-Year Old Girl.

ATHENS, Ga., October 4.—[Special.]—Sheriff Weir and Policeman Kelly went out to Mrs. King's place Friday evening to arrest Callie Shakspeare, the negro who committed a rape on the eight-year old daughter of Mr. Hiram Lester. When they reached the house they found that Captain John Tuck and several others had already preceded them and were then in full chase after the negro. Before the sheriff could get horses and saddles the men who were in pursuit returned and reported that the negro had escaped them. A number of shots were fired at him before he got out of sight. Captain Tuck put his dogs after him. The dogs ran him about two miles and lost the trail. Mr. Lester, the father of the child, has offered a reward of $25 for the arrest of the negro. The negro asked Mr. Lester to let the little girl go to the field where he was picking cotton, to keep him company. Mrs. Lester objected, and told him that Mattie must first drive the cow to the pasture. The negro went off and hid out until the girl returned, and when she started to the field the negro seized her and committed the horrible offense.

Scrofula From Childhood.

GRAND JUNCTION, Tenn., September 25, 1884.—My sister has been suffering with scrofula from childhood. She had a large wend or tumor on her neck and sores on person. She was treated by one or two physicians. Finally I carried her to Hot Springs, Ark. But nothing done her any good. I was prompted to try Swift's Specific, having seen it advertised for scrofula. It acted like a charm. The wenu disappeared from her neck and the sores all healed up, she having used only four bottles. She is almost entirely well, and I am sure, with the half dozen bottles, she will be entirely cured. C. W. DENNEY.

A Colored Laboring Man.

CORINTH, Miss., Sept. 22, 1884.

I had a colored laborer in my employ who was afflicted with the worst case of blood poison I ever saw. He had great knots on his neck and head, and great running sores, and no treatment he received done him any good. I put him on S. S. S., and made him take it four times a day, and wash the sores with S. S. S. two or three times a day, and four bottles produced an entire cure. I have known other cases of blood poison treated similarly with same result. I was cured of a skin disease in like manner. It is the best medicine in the world. R. O. BEAN.

Rheumatism and Cancer.

FLORENCE, ALA., September 22, 1884.

I have been suffering with rheumatism and with a cancer in my ear for about three years. I was treated with iodide of potash, which I think done me harm in producing rheumatism so that I could not walk. About a year ago I was induced to take Swift's Specific, and have taken several bottles. My rheumatism is gone, and the cancer is on the road to cure, being greatly relieved. This medicine has done me more good than anything else I have ever taken. It is the best blood purifier in the world. JOHN S. MORROW.

WETUMPKA, ALA., September 27, 1884.

About six years ago I became afflicted with a very disagreeable skin disease, with large dry sores and many crusted pimples on my face, hands and shoulder. The sore on my shoulder eats hole nearly an inch deep, and the cancerous appearance of one of the sores near my eye alarmed me very much. I tried all kinds of treatment, but found nothing that seemed to affect the disease, until finally I was advised by a physician to use Swift's Specific. In a short time the scabs dropped from the sores, and left my skin smooth and well. I consider the S. S. S. the greatest blood medicine in the world, and the only remedy which will reach and eradicate such a disease as I had. I think my trouble was from a long attack of malarial fever, contracted while farming in the swamps of the Tallapoosa river. I can be found at my office in the courthouse at any time you may wish to refer to me. J. L. RHODES, Deputy Sheriff Elmore Co., Ala.

Saved His Life.

A PHYSICIAN'S TESTIMONY.

I was called to see Mr. John Pearson, who was confined to his bed with what appeared to be consumption of the worst form. As all of his family had died of that dread disease (except his half brother), his death was regarded as certain and soon. After exhausting all the remedies, I finally as a last resort, sent for a bottle of Brewer's Lung Restoror and it acted like magic. He continued the use of it for some time and has been fully restored to health. So far as I could discover, he had consumption, and Brewer's Lung Restorer saved his life.

ANOTHER RESCUE FROM DEATH.

In 1881, while sewing on a machine, my wife was taken with a severe pain in her side, which was soon followed by hemorrages from her lungs, severe cough and fever, and could neither eat or sleep, and in a few weeks was reduced to a mere skeleton. Her stomach refused to retain any food, and the physician thought one of her lungs was entirely gone. At a final consultation of two physicians her case was pronounced hopeless. I tried Brewer's Lung Restorer by advice of one of the physicians, and she began to improve after the third dose. She continued the medicine, and is now in excellent health, and is better than she has been in several years. I believe Brewer's Lung Restorer saved her life.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

ITEMS OF INTEREST ABOUT THE GREAT METROPOLIS,

The Wonders of the Eden Musee--"The Temptation of St. Anthony" in Plaster--The New Bucket Shops--Young Writers at the Authors' Club--Other Interesting Topics.

New York, October 3.—[Special Correspondence of The Constitution.]—I went into the Eden Musee, which is a wax-work show, the other afternoon and was surprised to find there among the figures a plaster group representing the temptation of St. Anthony. The theme is one which has inspired every one who ever held a brush or chisel, but in this case there was something so novel and risky in the treatment of the subject that I paused and studied it with no small degree of interest. There was nothing remarkable about St. Anthony except his mouth, which showed signs of vacillating, and his eyes which were turned slyly in the direction of the tempting siren at his side. I looked at her and beheld a veritable Parisienne arrayed in the dress of a nun. Her face was just such a one as may be seen on the Boulevard any fine afternoon. In her reckless laugh and graceful pose there was a suggestive dash which transports me at once to the Paris concert hall. No wonder the respectable old saint—the Joseph Prudhomme of his church and time—showed signs of weakening. And what artist had dared to depict him in such bad company? An inscription, penned by a German who disdained punctuation, brought a smile to my face: "The temptation of St. Anthony by Mdlle. Yeldo at the age of 21 years." I wondered who Mdlle. Yeldo was, and how she had made the acquaintance of the saint. A musical clatter of French tongues behind me made me turn my head. There were two stylishly dressed young women, unmistakably Parisiennes. With them was the noted Edward S. Stokes, critically examining the work before him. "How long did it take you to make this?" he inquired in French.

"Only a month," replied the shorter and younger of the two women. I looked at her with interest. She was small, dark and extremely vivacious and witty. She talked and laughed incessantly and amused both of her companions by her remarks. An hour later I was taken up stairs to her studio and introduced to her. She wore a working dress composed of a skirt and loose blouse of white flannel. Beside her perched on a high stool, was a gray-bearded gentlemen, who was watching her movements with a good deal of interest. It was Lucky Baldwin, the San Francisco millionaire, whose bust she was modelling in clay. She had only been in New York a short time, she told me, and was staying at a fashionable hotel with a female companion, the young Parisienne whom I had seen down stairs. She was going to San Francisco shortly to see the fur west and visit some friends there. She had practiced her art in Paris and exhibited a group at the last salon. I have heard a great deal of the strict seclusion in which French girls were kept, but surely here is one with progressive and thoroughly American ideas.

I ran down to the oil exchange yesterday just to see how the new bucket shop arrangement worked. The exchange is a small one, the seats are cheap, and any man with the money can get into it. It had, until recently, dealt entirely in oil, but now it has established a branch for dealing in stocks in ten-share lots. A man can flop about among the stocks in the oil exchange for about a one hundreth part of the capital that it would take to skirmish around the edges of the stock exchange. It is expected that the oil exchange will prove in time to be a powerful rival to the older and wealthier establishment. The speculators buy and sell on margin and a man may go down there with a ten dollar bill and feel quite a Jay Gould if he happens to strike a winner for a day or two. The stock exchange seats cost anywhere from twenty-three thousand to twenty-eight. The advantages of this is, however, when a member dies his widow, or heir, receive $10,000 from the stock exchange fund. This amount is a safe insurance and cannot be touched by the creditors of the dead member. No such scheme as this exists in the oil exchange. It only costs about four hundred dollars to become a full-fledged member. The different members of this ambitious exchange take turns in selling stocks, and everything is conducted on a free, easy and rather domestic scale. Half of the clerks in Wall street and all the broken-down millionaires, impoverished speculators in the large board, are now on hand bright and early at the down town place. The millionaire brokers of the stock exchange hold up their hands in horror of this move of the hitherto despised rival. They point out the fact that it is corrupting the morals of office boys and trusted employes, and insist that the place shall be suppressed.

It is the impression among the shrewd Wall street men that the stock department of the oil exchange will continue to grow until it becomes a veritable rival of this monopolistic neighbor. The crowd of speculators which surrounds the board is not a distinguished one, however. There are a few spruce, well dressed and wide-awake young men who are buying for their friends or scalping for themselves, but the majority of the gamblers look shaggy, shabby and evidently in hard luck. They talk glibly of stocks, and whenever they make a strike they raise their hands and eyes to heaven and sigh, "Oh, if this was only a thousand shares instead of ten."

The style of drinking places changes very often. A year or two ago the French cafe with its small wire legged tables, obsequious waiters and wicker-work chairs was very popular. Since that time, however, there has been a recession of feeling, and the old simon pure original and stand-up-at-the-bar-and-drink barroom has come back again. Of course, the barrooms are very much more gorgeous than they were years ago. The business has been taken away from the small fry liquor dealers, and men of means and shrewdness have gone into it. One man or a firm of men with a capital of one hundred thousand dollars or thereabouts, will start out in the business of the retail saloon keeper. I have in mind a firm now that bids fair to become enormously wealthy in a few years. They struck the right head, just as the people were getting tired of the case, and built a huge barroom near the New York end of the East river bridge. The place itself is a perfect palace, the bar being thirty or forty feet long. At the same time that this saloon was thown open, they started four other places. One at the battery, another on Broadway near Canal street, the third at Fifth avenue and Fourteenth street, and the fourth on Forty seventh street. All of them are fitted up in the most expensive and lavish manner. Four or five expert bartenders and a chubby bey cashier stand behind the counters. These men are white aproned, white coated, cleanly and deft. A feature of the saloons is a free luncheon of generous proportions and extraordinary variety. A negro presides over this and helps everybody courteously. A man can drop into any of these places, whether he is a negro cartman, an Irish car driver, a corner loafer, a dude, or a millionaire and buy his drink. In case he swallows too much his disbursement of money will remain in the tempter's till, while his own person, now become obnoxious, will be thrown into the street. Squeezed oranges are as worthless here as elsewhere.

There are a number of young writers who make New York their home and who are rapidly making themselves known. Most of them belong to the Author's club and take an active interest in that association of literary men. The rooms of this club are on 24th street, near Broadway and directly over those occupied by the Fencer's club. It is a noteworthy fact that a number of men are members of both organizations.

The Author's club has fortnightly meetings at which may often be seen some of the brightest and best known of our younger writers. They do not come in dress suits, but are apt to affect sacque coats, and shooting jackets. They do not indulge in solemn literary discourses or try to "show off," as children say. They talk about the theater and opera, athletics and prize fighting, books and beer very much as other people do, and try not to talk too much "shop."

Mr. Richard Watson Gilder, who is a regular attendant at the meetings of both the Fencers' and Arthors' clubs, is a slight man with a mustache, rather long hair, an intellectual face and a marvelous pair of eyes. In the latter respect he always reminds me of Frank Stockton, who does not live in New York, and, consequently, is not to be seen at the Authors' club. As editor of the Century Magazine and a buyer of large amounts of manuscripts, Mr. Gilder is held in high esteem by all the members of his club.

Julian Hawthorne is one of the handsomest men to be seen in the rooms at one of these meetings. He is about six feet in height, and has a strong, clear-cut, intelligent face, and a full beard of dark red. His manners are quiet and dignified, his conversation agreeable and at times brilliant. He is not over-fond of his brother-in-law, George Parsons Lathrop, a stout man of thirty, with a handsome face and dark eyes. Hawthorne lives and works somewhere on Long Island. Lathrop and his wife (Rose Hawthorne) enjoy life in a snug flat up town.

Edgar Fawcett does not go to the Authors' club, because he has quarreled with nearly all its members. Fawcett, although a hard worker and a writer of great ability, has the self esteem of a peacock and a musician combined. He never forgets or forgives a slight, and there are not many men in literary and journalistic circles with whom he has not quarreled whenever occasion offered.

W. H. Bishop, the author of "Dehmold," "The House of a Merchant Prince," is a tall and rather good looking man of thirty-three or thereabouts. He is from the west, and takes life in a rather serious way. His conversation is rather more diverting than some of his books.

H. C. Bunner and Brander Matthews write a great deal together, and have just published a volume of short stories called "In Partnership." Mr. Bunner, who is the editor of Puck, is a clerical looking young man with eyeglasses and black side whiskers. His partner is tall and has straggling whiskers. He is a gentleman of leisure and writes because he likes to. He has a handsome house and a fine library, and is fond of entertaining literary and artistic folk on Sunday evenings.

I might say, in conclusion, that a feature of the meetings of the Authors' club is the punch which is brewed by some learned member and appreciated by all.

Attracted by an advertisement which announced that there was a man at an address on Third avenue, who wrote poetry, love letters and other things of a tender and sentimental nature, a writer called at the indicated number and found a small cigar shop presided over by a middle-aged man. He was smoking one of his own cigars as he leaned over the show case, and talking didactically to a weak-kneed friend who devoted most of his time to an earnest inspection of his mustache in the mirror. When the visitor made his errand known, the man behind the counter looked at him impressively for a long time, and then nodded his head portentiously.

"You're goin' to fall up against somethin'," he said slowly. "It'll knock you all shiverin' when you take it all in an' you'll feel that this town's got a man what can sling ink with the best of 'em. What's his name? Well, you'll excuse me, but it's necessary to move very carefully in this thing," said the dealer very confidentially. "You see, my friend ain't lookin' for fame, cause if he was he could git a star engagement on any noosepaper in New York. What he's lookin' for is a nice, steady little business that'll run along twelve months in the year and pay comfortably."

"When can I see him?"

"Well, now," said the man earnestly, "you're gettin' it down fine. You see he's a little sly about showin' himself, bein' already pretty well known in literatoor, and he don't want his compeers to get onto his lay. See? Well, such bein' the case he has sort 'o' given me a quiet steer to the effect that I'm to take whatever comes in here and take it to him. Then he does it up in the highest style of the art, and I give it to you again."

"What can he do?"

"What kin he do?" asked the dealer, straightening up with an aggressive air, "what kin he do? Well, what can't he do, that's what I want to know. There aint nothin' that he isn't equal to, from writin' an elegant love letter of either sex, doin' poetry both solemn, joyous and otherwise, mappin' out an after-dinner speech, and givin' a neat and touching toast, to gittin' up an advertisement that 'll make all New York hum."

"What are his terms?"

"One dollar, payable when the gem is handed over to——"

"Well, say," interrupted the weak-kneed young man savagely turning away from the mirror, "are you goin' to attend to that little matter or ain't you? Do you expect me to stand here all night while you're shootin' off your mouth to this gentlexian? Will you do it or won't you?

"I won't."

"Not even a small loan?"

"Not a cent."

"That settles it," said the young man, taencaingly, "I'll get even with you if it costs me a leg," upon which he swaggered out of the shop.

"Now, sir," said the dealer turning with professional urbanity towards his visitor, "what'd you like to have done?"

"It's impossible for me to see this man, is it?"

"Well, between us two, I'll admit that it's a dead sure impossibility. He's a genius and he's naturally sly. You give me your orders when you've made up your mind and everything'll be serene."

The dealer bowed suavely, nodded with an air of great importance, and said good-night. As the writer passed a group of young men who sat on the coal box of the grocery store on the corner, a voice said "thist!" and the weak-kneed young man came towards him.

"Did you get onto his little racket?" he asked with a grin.

"What racket?"

"The gas his nibs in the cigar store was tryin' to give you about the literary man?"

"Who is the literary man?"

"Who? Why, his nibs himself, of course."

FRANKLIN.

Don't Sell Your Factory Stock.

From the Augusta Evening News.

A well-posted financier was heard to remark on the streets that now was the best time to buy cotton factory stock and the worst time to sell. He prophesied that in 1885 the spindles in Georgia would be doubled, and the talk of over-production would be regarded as nonsense. The south can and is going to manufacture the cotton, and all that is needed is a tariff reform to give the south the benefit of the markets of the world. Cotton factory stock is still one of the best possible investments, and the people would soon find it out.

An Appropriate Exchange.

From the Albany News and Advertiser.

Nothing could have been more appropriate or pleasing than the exchange of congratulations between the World, the great democratic daily of New York, and THE CONSTITUTION, the great democratic daily of Georgia. Southern democrats will remember the efforts of these two influential journals to secure the triumphs of honest methods in the United States.

Irishmen Will Stand True.

From the St. Louis Republican.

There is no fact more obvious than that the alleged disaffection of Irish-born citizens with the democratic national ticket, if it ever had any existence, is melting into nothing. There will be as nearly a unanimous front offered by Irishmen against the republican party in November as there ever has been in the history of elections in the United States.

Hie, lads and lassies! nie away!
Nor brook a single hours delay,
If you would carry in your mouth
White teeth, and ordors of the South

AT TEAGUE POTEET'S.

A Sketch of the Hog Mountain Range.

BY JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS.

[Copyright, 1884. All rights reserved.]

II

Naturally enough, the government took no account of Sis Poteet. The commissioner at Washington conferred with the marshal for Georgia by mail, and begged him to exert himself to the utmost to break up the business of illicit distilling in the Hog Mountain range. In view of an important election about to be held in some doubtful state in the north or west, the worthy commissioner at Washington even suggested the propriety of another armed raid, to be made up of deputy marshals and a detachment of men from the Atlanta garrison. But the marshal for Georgia did not fall in with this suggestion. He was of the opinion that if a raid was to be made at all it should not be made blindly, and he fortified his opinion with such an array of facts and arguments that the bureau finally left the whole matter to his discretion.

Early one morning, in the summer of 1879, a stranger on horseback rode up the straggling red road that formed the principal business thoroughfare of Gullettsville, and made his way toward the establishment known as the Gullettsville hotel. The chief advertisement of the hotel was the lack of one. A tall, worm-eaten post stood in front of the building, but the frame in which the sign had swung was empty. This post, with its empty frame, was as significant as the art of blazonry could have made it. At any rate, the stranger on horseback—a young man—pressed forward without hesitation. The proprietor himself, Squire Lemuel Pleasants, wes standing upon the low piazza as the young man rode up. The squire wore neither coat nor hat. His thumbs were caught behind his suspenders, giving him an air of ease or of defiance, as one might choose to interpret, and his jaws were engaged in mashing into shape the first quid of the morning.

As the young man reined up his horse at the door, Squire Pleasants stepped briskly inside and pulled a string which communicated with a bell somewhere in the back yard.

"This is the Gullettsville hotel, is it not?" the young man asked.

"Wel, sir," responded the squire, rubbing his hands together, "sence you push me so clost, I'll not deny that this here's the tavern. Some calls it the hotel, some calls it the Pleasant house, some one thing, an' some another; but as for me, I say to all, says I, 'boys, it's a plain tavern.' In Fergeenia, sir, in my young days, they wa'n't nothin' better than a tavern. 'Light, sir, 'light," continued the hospitable squire, as a tow-headed stable boy tumbled out at the door in response to the bell; "drap right down an' come in."

The young man followed the landlord into a bare little office, where he was given to understand in plain terms that people who stopped with Squire Pleasants were expected to make themselves completely at home. With a pen upon which the ink had been dry for many a day the young man inscribed his name on a thin and dirty register,—"Philip Woodward, Clinton, Georgia:" whereupon the squire, with unnecessary and laborious formality, assigned Mr. Woodward to a room.

Judging from appearance, the United States marshal for Georgia had not gone astray in selecting Woodward to carry out the delicate mission of arranging for a successful raid upon Hog Mountain. Lacking any distinguishing trait of refinement or culture, his composure suggested the possession of that necessary information which is the result of contact with the world and its inhabitants. He had that large air of ease and tranquillity which is born of association, and which represents one of the prime elements of the curious quality we call personal magnetism. He was ready-witted, and full of the spirit of adventure. He was the owner of the title to a land lot somewhere in the neighborhood of Hog Mountain, and this land lot was all that remained of an inheritance that had been swept away by the war. There was a tradition—perhaps only a rumor—among the Woodwards that the Hog Mountain land lot covered a vein of gold; and to investigate this was a part of the young man's business in Gullettsville, entirely subordinate, however, to his desire to earn the salary attached to his position.

The presence of a stranger at the hospitable tavern of Squire Pleasants attracted the attention of the old and young men of leisure, and the most of them gathered upon the long, narrow piazza to discuss the matter. Uncle Jimmy Wright, the sage of the village, had inspected the name in the register and approved of it.

He had heard of it before, and he proceeded to give a long and rambling account of whole generations of Woodwards. Jake Cohen, a pedler, who with marvelous tact had fitted himself to the conditions of life and society in the mountains, and who was supposed to have some sort of connection with the traffic in "blockade" whisky, gave some reminiscences of a family of Woodwards in Ohio. Tip Watson, who had a large local reputation for humor, gravely inquired of Squire Pleasants if the new comer had left any message for him.

Doubtless the squire, or some one else, would have attempted a facetious reply to Mr. Watson; but just then a tall, gaunt, gray-haired, grizzly-bearded man stepped upon the piazza, and saluted the little gathering with an awkward wave of the hand. The not unkindly expression of his face was curiously heightened (or deepened) by the alertness of his eyes, which had the quizzical restlessness we sometimes see in the eyes of birds or animals. It was Teague Poteet, and the greetings he received were of the most effusive character.

"Howdy, boys, howdy!" he said, in response to the chorus. "They hain't airy one er you gents kin spit up a twenty dollar chunk er greenbacks, is they?"

Tip Watson made a pretence of falling in a chair and fainting; but he immediately recovered, and said in a sepulchral whisper,—

"Ef you find anybody dead, an' they ain't got no twenty dollar bill on their person, don't come a-knockin' at my door. Lord!" he continued, "look at Cohen's upper lip a-trimblin.' He wants to take that bill out somewheres an' hang it on a clothes-line.'

"Owl" exclaimed Cohen, "yoost lizzen at date man! Date Teep Vasten, he so foony as allt tem utter peoples put tergetter. Vait, Teague, vait! I chance date pill right avay, terreckerly."

But Teague was absorbed in some information which Squire Pleasants was giving him.

"He don't favor the gang," the squire was saying, with emphasis, "an' I'll be boun' he ain't much mixed up wi' 'em. He 's another cut. Oh, they ain't a-feelin' me this season of the year," he continued, as Teague Poteet shook his head doubtfully; "he ain't mustered out'n his mind yit, not by a dad-blamed sight. I'm jest a-tellin' of you; he looks spry, an' he ain't no sneak,—I'll swar to that on the stan'."

"Well, I tell you, square," responded Teague, dryly, "I hain't never seed people too purty to pester yuther folks; an' I reckon you ain't nuther, is you?"

"No," said Squire Pleasants, his experience appealed to instead of his judgment; "no, I ain't, that's a fact; but some folks youer bleege to take on trus'."

Further comment on the part of Poteet and the others was arrested by the appearance of Woodward, who came out of his room, walked rapidly down the narrow hall way and out upon the piazza. He was bareheaded, his hands were full of papers, and he had the air of a man of business. The younger men who had gathered around Squire Pleasants and Teague Poteet fell back loungingly as Woodward came forward with just the faintest perplexed smile.

"Judge Pleasants," he said, "I'm terribly mixed up, and I'll have to ask you to unmix me."

The squire cleared his throat, adjusted his spectacles, and straightened himself in his chair. The title of judge, and the easy air of deference with which it was bestowed, gave him an entirely new idea of his own importance. He frowned judicially as he laid his hand upon the papers.

"Well, sir," said he, "I'm gittin' ole, an' I reckon I ain't much, nohow; I'm sorter like the gray colt that tried to climb in the shuck-pen. I'm weak, but willin'. Ef you'll jest whirl in an' make indication whar'in I can he'p, I'll do the best I kin."

"I've come up here to look after a lot of land," said Woodward. "It is described here as lot No. 18, 276th district, Georgia Militia, part of land lot No. 11, in Tugaloo, formerly Towaliga county. Here is a plat of Hog Mountain, but somehwow I can't locate the lot."

The squire took the papers and began to examine them with painful particularity.

"That 'ar lot," said Teague Poteet, after awhile; "is the ole Mathis lot. This line runs right across my simblin' patch, an' backs up ag'in' my boss-stable."

"Tooby shore,—tooby shore!" exclaimed the squire. "Tut-tut! What am I doin'? My mind is drappin' loose like seed-ticks from a shumake bush. Tooby shore, it's the Mathis lot. Wr. Woodeerd, Mr. Potect—Mr. Potect, Mr. Wooderd; lem me make you interduced, gents."

Mr. Woodward shook hands gracefully and cordially,—Potect awkwardly and a trifle suspiciously.

"It seems to me, Mr. Poteet," said Woodward, "that I have seen your name in the papers somewhere."

"Likely," replied Poteet; "they uv bin a mighty sight er printin' gwine on sence the war, so I've heern tell. Ef you'd a-drapped in at Atlanty, you mought er seed my name mixt up in a warrant."

"How is that?" Woodward asked.

"Bekase I bin a-bossin' my own affa'rs."

Potect had straightened himself up, and he looked at Woodward with a steadiness which the other did not misunderstand. It was a look which said, "If you've got that warrant in your pocket, it won't be safe to pull it out in these diggin's."

Squire Pleasants recognized the challenge that made itself heard in Teague Potect's voice.

"Yes, yes," he said, in a cheerful tone, "our folks is seen some mighty quare doin's sence the war; but times is a-gittin' a long ways better now."

"Better, hell!" exclaimed Sid Parmalee.

What he would have said further, no one can know; for the voluminous voice of Cohen broke in.—

"Took ow-ut, t'ere, Sid! took ow-ut! t'at pad man kedge you!"

This remarkable admonition was received with a shout of laughter. Good humor was restored; and it was increased when Woodward, shortly afterwards, drinking with the boys at Nix's saloon, called for three fingers of Mountain Dew, and washed it down with the statement that it tasted just as nice as liquor that had been stamped by the government. In short, Woodward displayed such tact and entered with such heartiness into the spirit of the people around him that he disarmed the trained suspicions of a naturally suspicious community. Perhaps this statement should be qualified. Undoubtedly the marshal could he have made a personal inspection of Woodward and his surroundings, would have praised his subordinate's tact. The truth is, while he had disarmed their suspicions, he had failed utterly to gain their confidence.

With a general as well as a particular interest in the direction of Hog Mountain, it was natural that Deputy Marshal Woodward should meet or overtake Miss Potect as she rode back and fourth between Gullettsville and the gray notch in the mountain known as Potect's. It was natural too, that he should take advantage of the social informalities of the section and make her acquaintance. It was an acquaintance in which Woodward and, presumably, the young lady herself became very much interested; so that the spectacle of this attractive couple galloping along together over the red road that connected the Valley with the Mountain came to be a familiar one. And its effect upon those who paused to take note of it was not greatly different from the effect of such spectacles in other sections. Some looked wise and shook their heads sorrowfully; some smiled and looked kindly, and sent all manner of good wishes after the young people. But whether they galloped down the Mountain in the fresh hours of the morning, or ambled up its dark slope in the drowsy hours of the evening, neither Woodward nor Sis Potect gave a thought to the predictions of spite or to the prophecies of friendliness.

Spring Without blossoms

Late in Life to Look for Joy—Yet Never too Late to Mend.

Readers of Hawthorne's "House of Seven Gables will recall the pathos with which poor Clifford Pycheon, who had been unjustly imprisoned since his early manhood, said, after his release: "My life is gone, and where is my happiness? Oh! give me my happiness." But that could be done only in part, as gleams of warm sunshine occasionally fall across the gloom of a New England autumn day.

In a letter to Messrs. Hiscox & Co., Mr. L. H Titus, of Pennington, N. J., says: "I have suffered untold misery from childhood from chronic disease of the bowels and diarrhœ, accompanied by great pain. I sought relief at the hands of physicians of every school and used every patent and domestic remedy under the sun. I have at last found in PARKER'S TONIC a complete specific, preventive and cure. It is your invaluable medicine, which did for me what nothing else could do, is entitled to the credit of my getting back my happy days, I cheerfully and gratefully acknowledge the fact."

Mr. E. S. Wells, who needs no introduction to the people of Jersey City, adds: "The testimonial of Mr. Titus is genuine and voluntary; only he does not adequately portray the suffering he has endured for many years. He is my brother-in-law, and I know the case well. He is now perfectly free from his old troubles, and enjoys health and life, ascribing it all to PARKER'S TONIC

A SKETCH OF LIFE IN THE BACK-WOODS.

Betsy Tells How Her Brother Had His Cotton Picked Without Much Expense--Sammy Gooden Scares the Old Woman With a Snake--Muscadine Hunting, Etc., Etc.

Buddy had overcrapt his-self with cotton, it allers takes more hands to pick it out than it do to plant it, and after pap had that ar bone fellum on his right thumb and couldn't pick cotton nor do nothin' else, buddy, he tried kirin' of hands to hep git it out, and them he hired by the day and found 'em, didn't more'n yearn ther dinner, and them he hired at fifty cents a hundred he cotch 'em puttin' rocks in the cotton, but he needn't never speck nothin' else from them low down Simmonses and Potter boys. And so he got mad and lowed ef he couldn't pick it his-self it could go on picked. But fits been so dry the cotton's opened monstrous fast, and it was a hangin' in big white locks from one end of the row to tother, and it looked like a pity not to git it out fore the rain sot in ta spile it. Feared like I'd rather pick it aster eat sugar, so I and Flurridy turned in and hope him, and Old Miss Green 'lowed:

"Haint you gals afeard some body will pass leng the road and see you with them bags tied around you a pickin' cotted?" "What if they do," says Flurridy Tennysy, "haint it our own hand and our own cotton? And aster the bags to be sho they aint pretty, but its the easiest way to pick it." "But they mought laugh at you," says she. "Well, what if they do? Laughin' is healthy," says she, "they tell me, thats the way to grow fat." "That gal's a plum sight," says Aunt Nancy, as Flurridy grabbed up the cotton basket and clum the fence into the five acre field. Buddy 'lowed we'uns had worked so hard here of late that he was a gittin' plum sick for a frolic, we hadn't saw no fun sense the apple peelin', and he lowed to gin a cotton pickin', ax in a gang of boys to pick tel dinner then etter dinner they could dance and play kissin' games and go home longer the gals by moonlight. So we riz by the peep of day and red up the house and swept the yeard, and wheeled into gittin' dinner. It takes a power of vittles for workin' hands. Buddy he kilt a pig, and you think Cousin Pink would eat a mouthful of it, kase she had slopt it and it was a pet: but time they all got done eatin' thar wasn't a feet nor a year of it left. It had ingons and red pepper and sage on it, and was baked longer sweet taters. Pap cut off one of the ribs for old man Simpson, and he greased his mouth from year to year, and lowed it was "good enough to make a poor man swaller his tongue."

Buddy never had no trouble in gittin' up his crowd. They come soon and let in on the five acre field, and cleaned it up like a passel of army worms. The settin' room was plum full of gals. Caledony was the life of the crowd, and Cousin Pink wasn't far behind her. They had jist tried they-selves to see how many riddles they could tell, and Caledony had told all our fortunes with cards, and we'uns had all had a power of fun, all 'cept two or three gals that never has no fun th out a boy is about.

I looked outen the winder and seed little Sammy Gooden a comin' across the track patch hard as he could stave, hollerin', "Snake! snake! snake!" Maw she grabbed the cam-fire and Aunt Nancy the wizzard ile—that 'oman will die by wizzard ile—and they come a runnin' out'n breath. Maw with her hands full of dough, and Aunt Nancy with a ingon and case knife one hand and the wizzard ile in tother, shore somebody was a snake bit. Jist then Sam he clum the yard fence and flung a dead snake up in a apple tree.

"Now hang thar," says he, "tel it rains. Oh, it's a gwine to rain sho and sartin, kase I hung up a snake. Snake baked a hoo-cake and sot the frog to mind it," he sung so loud he couldn't hear a word we'uns said. He had fetch the jug to take the boys some water, and when he seed me in the door he sung on in the same tune, "Miss Betsy, here's a note, a note, note, notey," then stopt singin' and handed me the note a little dirty piece of paper that read:

"Miss Betsy nary loc er coten is not a gwine to be pick in the cric botom feel sep you yag ladys cums to hep. I chuse you, and Bill say he chuse Miss Pink frum your fron Jackson Gates."

"Miss Betsy," says Sammy, "them boys says they be dog gone of they picks arry nuther bole er cotten ef you gals don't come and hep 'em. They've done swep the five acre, and fixin' to go into the crick bottom. They air a choosin' up sides like it was a spellin' match."

"What do you say, gals," says I; "shall we go?"

"All in favor rise," and they all rix. So we pitched out and went.

Jackson Gates is about fourteen year old, but he thinks he is older'n his daddy. Cap Dewberry and iky Roberson axed me time I got thar to pick with them, but Jack Gates was a head of 'em, so him and me tuck a row together, and tothers all got ther partners and sot into pickin' and picked tel the horn blowed for dinner.

"We air a gwine over the creek after some musty-dimes after dinner," says Jack. "Will you incent er me to tote your basket."

I had a leetle grain rather went longer some of tother boys, but I thought it mought be funny to torment 'em, in pertickler Cap, so says I: "Yes, you can tote my basket, Jack, if you'll be a good little boy."

I seed he looked disappointed like he'd rather I wouldn't call him a boy.

Buddy he tuck the waggin and hauled up the cotton and weighed it, and our side got beat.

"Courtin' and work is two things that can't go on together," says pap. "Some of 'em on that side must er done more courtin' than work."

In cose he never thought about I and Jack, but Jack he tuck it all to his-sef and was turrible plagued: his face and years got red, and the laugh was turned on him. We played fishin' for love and Jack took me over thar; and we played thimble and he sillers give me the thimble. The old folks was a lookin' on, and I ever hearn Squire Roberson say to pap: "Oh, yes: he's a bigger man now than he will ever be again. See how he watches her, and see how jealous he is of tother fellers. He thinks he's in love, and nothin' but time can make that man a boy again."

Then when we got ready to go after muscadines every boy that axed me to go with him got mad when I told 'em I was gwine longer Jack. "Why Jack's nothin' but a little boy," they'd say. Cap Dewberry went up to him and lowed: "Look a here, Jacky boy, honey, you go longer the chillhu, and let me have Miss Betsy."

He got mad quick as lightnin', kase he tuck a notion that may be I wanted to go with Cap instead of him, and lowed: "I was tha fuss man that axed her, but of Miss Betsy air the gal to chuse to go longer one man when tother man axed her fuss, why I haint the man to say a word agin it."

I had my basket on my arm and was ready to go, so says I: "I choose to go longer you, Jack. You are the very man I'm a gwine with—the very man," says I, and we led the way to the creek.

On the way he said to me, "Miss Betsy, I know you thinks I'm a curis-man, but ef them boys don't let me alone about you I low to commit suicide on some of 'em, ef I'm hung fer it."

A Strong Run.

We are indebted to our republican contemporaries for the information that "Blaine is making a strong run." A strong run! The progress of an excited polecat would be mild and ambrodial by comparison.

Visits Charleston and Looks Upon Historic Fort Sumter.

I write you from the city of Charleston—the city by the sea. I am now looking afar off upon the distant waves, afar towards Fort Sumter, the historic place where the war began. I was ruminating about that small beginning a sad and terible conflict. That feeble cannonading that hardly shook the land and did not disturb the calm and peaceful sea, but it quivered the heart of a great nation, and was the shock that smothered peace and sounded the call of battle and of death. I wish I lived by the sea, not all the time, for I love our hills and mountains dearly, but I would like to have a home down here where I could bring the good wife and children and let them feast upon new scenes and look with rapture and with wonder upon the mighty ocean. How calm, how peaceful when at rest, how terrible in the storm. I believe such things enlarge us and make us better. They dignify the great creator and fill us with awe and make us conscious of our own humility, while sitting now upon the wharf watching the restless waters I cannot wonder at the emotion of Lord Byron when he wrote that sublime and beautiful verse

There is surely something in nature that moulds a man to her image. Not all men but most men. They say that blood will tell, but blood is not all. Blooded stock, whether of man or beast will not keep up on the piney woods. It will degenerate, we can almost tell where men came from by looking at them and talking to them. The mountains produce a shifty, thrifty active people, always smart, always in a hurry. The plains produce a quiet slow moving, dignified population, who love their ease and care for their comfort and take time to entertain their friends. If a Charleston man or a Savannah man is not dignified and courteous he is nothing. If an east Tennessean is not sharp and close and calculating he is nothing. And so between the seacoast and the mountains we find all grades and all mixtures. I have just visited three pleasant villages in South Carolina and mingled with their people and enjoyed them for they are in no hurry to get through life, and content with their lot. I never saw a merchant hunting for trade. I never saw one like Jot Camp, of Rome, taking the streets to induce custom, and working and toiling for business. That is all right and I admire him and his diligence, but I cant help noting the difference. Then there is Patillo, of Cartersville, I've watched him as a typical man, a genuine north Georgian, as restless as the troubled sea, working all the time and watching for opportunities. He buys at a venture and sells on sight and uses the bank and duns his customers and deals in anything that offers a dollar of profit. Atlanta is that same way, for Atlanta is made up of north Georgians. Most all their successful men came from there, and they are smart and their motto is "Push along, keep moving."

It was the bracing nervous air of the mountains that made Moore and Marsh and Kiser and Rhode Hill and Wyley and Wyly and Peters and Dougherty and many others. Evan Howell has mountain stock in him, and so has Hemphill and Grady and that is why they succeed. They are the stock that will climb up and succeed without capital or friends. Nothing can keep them down. A Macon man will succeed in Macon but he would hardly succeed in Atlanta, unless he had a good backing and some special advantages. Some Charleston men who moved to Atlanta have succeeded, but they had abundant capital and got north Georgia boys to help them. There is a wide difference between Macon and Atlanta in their methods of business. The Atlanta men walk faster, talk faster and chew more tobacco and give more bank notes, and dun harder and brag eternally on Atlanta. Well, that is all right. That is business, and that is what makes Atlanta. Why, a man can break all to pieces in Atlanta and rise again in two months and smile serenely.

Venerable Charleston! I have not been here for 30 years. When I was a merchant I used to trade here. Twice a year I made my pilgrimage here and bought my goods, and now it makes me sad to wander around in search of the old familiar places and find new signs. I saw one hanging on a wall; it was correcting from the iron hand of time, but it was there—the same old sign, "Hyatt McBarney & Co." But they were not there, and no succession. The sign was all. Happily I found one, but only one old friend, Mr. McGahan, the honest Scotchman, now of Edwin Bates & Co., and the head of the house. He is the only one left of the old stock. I used to deal with a noble gentleman of the pure Charleston type. His house has a branch in Atlanta which shows his business sagacity. Sitting down by him, I asked many questions and the answer was dead, dead—out of business—moved away. Even Vanderzee, the last survivor of Wiley, Banks & Co., is thumping flies in New York, and has passed his three score and ten. Van was the best merchant I ever knew except Mr. Norton, of Rome and he couldn't talk to you a minute without thumping a fly from your clothes, or catching him as he flew. He was the best catch on the fly I ever saw, and he is at it yet. But those time-honored names of honorable men—names that I respected, for they did business on honorable principles, and they were the pride of Charleston—where are they? There were the Bowies, and Gillilands, and Fleming, and Lunham, and Dewing, Thayer & Co., and Chamberlain, Meier & Co., and McKenzie, Gilow & Co., and Clark, Hyde & Co., and Stoddard, and Courtenay, Tennant & Co., and I don't know how many more I used to trade with. Well, they are all gone, or out or dead—and it is only thirty years since they were in their glory. And so we all pass away soon, and be no more remembered than Rutherford B. Hayes. But I did meet Mr. Courtenay, and he is well and well preserved, and is the president of a bank, and is honored by that people. His brother is the mayor of Charleston.

and is worthy of the honor his people have shown him. I reverence these old classic names, for they are classic. There is something in a name. There's nothing in mine, I know, but whenever I meet with a Calhoun or a Lamar or Cobb or Lowndes or Rutledge or Bowie or Courtenay or Pickens or such like, I naturally expect something of the man, and if he is neither good or great, all I can say is that he has gone back on his ancestors, which he oughtent to have done.

Well, I love Charleston. My dear mother was born here—my best eartly friend except my wife—my dear old mother, who still loves to bless me and pray for me, and who, if she had the privilege, would forgive all my sins. For her sake I reverence this place, and if I could know the spot, the sacred spot, that gave her birth, I would go to it like the pilgrims went to Mecca. But, alas! I do not know. She does not know, for she was hurried away during a pestilence, when father and mother were but a day in their graves.

These memories are sweet, and tender, and refining. I wandered along the street in Augusta the other day, looking for names, familiar names, but I did not find them. They, too, are dead or retired, and there is a new set of merchants and lawyers. But I was not lost or forgotten, for as time has rolled on I have made new friends, and I love them. I found John H. Davidson there, a genial gentleman, of whom his people are proud, and ought to be. And then I met that lovable man, My Maryland Randall, whose name is familiar to every household, and whose welcome comes from the heart as well as the hand. And that sterling, solid son of Erin, Pat Walsh, whom the people of Georgia delight to honor, and will yet honor. I love this good old Georgia city for its happy memories, and especially because Mrs. Arp was educated there, and her education was solid—solid as a rock—and she can do a sum now in her head quicker than I can on a slate, and is as sure in figures as an almanac. I was taken sick in Charleston once, at the Pavilion hotel, when old Mr. Butterfield was the proprietor, and I thought I had the yellow fever and was going to die. So I run away with the fever on me, for I wanted to die at home, and I reached home and for two months I was at the door of death, and living I did languish, and languishing did live, and one day a sweet, pretty girl with beautiful hazel eyes and raven hair, came to see me and brought me some flowers, and as I looked in her soft, sympathetic face I rallied and determined to get well. And I did. And I'm well yet, and so is she, and her children are mine and mine are hers. BILL ARP.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Health and Hot Weather—A Brewer as a British Peer.

HEALTH AND HOT WEATHER.—If the weather would remain uniformly warm we should find it comparatively easy, the "experts" tell us, to keep well. It is the sudden changes, the chilly nights and mornings of many hot days, and the cool days which are sandwiched in between the warm ones now and then—these are what cause sickness. It hardly seems likely after so much has been said, in the papers and elsewhere, in regard to wearing flannels, that some sort of an underwear is not worn by everybody. To wear such an undergarment is the only safe course. The diseases which attack in the summer operate rapidly, and are less easily checked than the ordinary winter ailments. Accordingly, all feasible precautions should be taken to prevent their first ravages.

One of the most important, though simplest, of these precautions is to pin or sew a piece of flannel, thick or thin, according to the force of the attack, over the bowels. The warmth and protection afforded by this measure will often suffice to cure an ordinary fit of summer sickness, and it should never be neglected. A spice poultice, made of different kinds of powdered spices, moistened and spread upon a piece of cloth (flannel is better than cotton, though either will do) and applied to the bowels is also efficacious; camphor is used in the same, or any kind of spirits.

Gum arabic water forms a good drink at such times. Lime water is a good thing to have on hand also for drinking. It is an innocent alkali and counteracts the acids which are formed in the stomach during the heats of summer. Sparing doses of camphor gum—mere crumbs—and of camphor and water are highly recommended, though it must be remembered that camphor, taken in large quantities, is poisonous.

Campers are advised to take some remedies, such as are mentioned, with them always. Many chronic cases of inflamed or irregular bowels, or of dyspepsia, have originated during camping tours, when sudden colds disordered the system, and no medicines were at hand. Chills are much more frequently the cause of summer sickness than anything which is eaten.

Jamaica ginger and French brandy are always safe remedies if taken moderately, but paregoric, chloroform, chloral or patent medicines should never be used except under the advice of a physician. They affect different organizations very differently, and often cause permanent troubles, even affecting the brain, a part of us which is never too highly endowed, and of which we need every atom possible to get or keep.

It is during the hot weather that the mortality among infants is at its greatest, and bottle-fed babies are vastly more liable to succumb to the heat than those fed as nature designed them all to be. Any mother who, knowing the relative difference in strength of constitution between the artificially and naturally fed infant, gives up the nursing of her baby, or does not make superhuman efforts to retain her power to nurse it, is not merely lacking true mother-love, but is guilty of the grant breach of the trust reposed in her by heaven.

Such unfortunate infants, however, as must be brought up on the bottle should be tended at this time with peculiar care. All the apparatus used in feeding them should be kept scrupulously clean; their little bodies washed daily; they should be given all the outdoor air possible during the cool hours, and the first symptoms of illness in them should be instantly attended to. The outside remedies which have been prescribed are especially applicable to these little ones, whose tender stomachs should never be subjected, except as a last alternative, to the action of strong medicines.—Practical Farmer.

TRAINING TOMATOES.—The neatest, best and most economical way of training and supporting tomatoes is to a single stake for each plant. The stakes should be straight, firm, about eight feet long, well pointed, and it is best to set them in first and then set the plants to them. Unless deeply in they may lean over when the soil is wet and soft, as is usual, strong, and their loads heavy. A simple rule for the training is this: "As soon as a blossom appears pinch out every side shoot below it." Tie to the stake as required to keep the stem erect, and so able to carry its load. The fruit will be safer from stray fowls, finer in color and flavor, more in quantity on the same area, the appearance trim and gardenesque, and a good lesson in plant raising will have been gained.—Experience.

DRUNKENNESS IN ENGLAND.—A book entitled "Nineteen Centuries of Drink in England" has lately appeared in London. It contains much that is interesting, and cites evidence that drunkenness has been more or less advice in England since a long time ago. But it was not always counted a vice, although preached against and denounced by priests, individually and in council, on many occasions. In the middle ages, it hardly appears discountenanced as a disgrace. Women were then in the habit of drinking in alehouses and at church ales. In a volume of "songs and carols" of the fifteenth century an unhappy husband laments that if his wife —will to the good ale ryde,

I must trot all by her syde,
And when she drinks I must abide.

In the romance, "Merline," there is an account of a young lady who got drunk at the ale. In the directory of good manners, entitled "How the Good Wife Taught Her Daughter," the young woman is told, "If thou be ofte drunke it putte thee to shame." One hood not commend the medieval habit of women frequenting alehouses, but it may be that with our changed manners it seems to us much worse than it was. In many parts of the continent respectable women go to the cafe without any sense of impropriety, and it is fair to believe that the women who went to the English alehouses 300 years ago acted with equally innocent intent.—Springfield Republican.

A BREWER AS A BRITISH PEER.—Benjamin Lee Guinness, the father of the present brewer, gave $1,000,000 to renovate St. Patrick's Cathedral, in Dublin, and he has been dead over ten years. He left his property with his two sons, Arthur and Cecil. Arthur was elected as member of parliament for Dublin city, was first knighted and afterward "created a lord." Thinking it beneath the dignity of a lord to run a brewery, he sold his interest therein to his brother for $5,000,000. He is known in the English peerage as Lord Ardaiun. Cecil Guinness is the largest porter brewer in the world. John Stuart Mill said: "No vessel ever leaves the English shores, be it on mercantile or missionary duties, that does not carry Guinness' porter in its hold. To every country England sends a Bible, Guinness sends a bottle of his famous XXX porter."—New York Evening Post.

THE CONSTITUTION,

Atlanta, Georgia.

ATLANTA, OCTOBER 5, 1884.

INDICATIONS for the South Atlantic States at 1 a. m., generally fair weather, except in the extreme southern portions, local rains and partly cloudy weather, generally light and variable winds, slight change in temperature.

THE ovation extended to Governor Cleveland in two days was more enthusiastic than that which has greeted Blaine during his whole hypodroming fact.

IT is said that editor Murat Halstead's prejudice is so intense that he refuses to wear cotton goods during the period of a presidential campaign. This great untamed should visit Atlanta after the election.

EX-GOVERNOR HENDRICKS is having the most lively campaign of the whole party. Between demonstrating that the rascals must be turned out and taking care of himself in railroad accidents, he is kept busy enough. His last escape was in West Virginia, where he has been rousing the democratic spirit.

DURING his stay in Buffalo, Grover Cleveland, in conversation with Bishop Ryan, took occasion to deny most emphatically that he obstructed in any way the passage of the bill through the New York legislature, giving Catholic prisoners liberty of conscience. This has been one of the charges most persistently pressed against him.

THE Mormons in Tennessee have been ordered to leave the state. The notices were served on pieces of paper nailed to trees. Some of the Mormons were not quite ready to leave, and sent for an extension of time by similar notices. The request was promptly granted with the admonition that it would not be repeated.

THE canvass for the governorship of Tennessee is prosecuted with great vigor. General Bate is the democratic candidate, while Hon. Frank T. Reid is the republican candidate. Barbecues, joint debates, and all the elements of the old-time canvass have been called into play. Nevertheless, Tennessee will give the usual ringing 40,000 majority for Cleveland and Bate.

WHETHER or not Georgia shall have an exhibit of her resources which shall be worthy of the name at the New Orleans exposition will depend on the action of the general committee of the state agricultural society. United States Commissioner Bacon will meet the committee at the capitol next Tuesday and it is hoped that some arrangement can be made that will result in a display of the rich and varied resources of Georgia before the eyes of the civilized world.

ONE of the most interesting campaigns in the late state election was that in Oglethorpe county. Mr. R. B. Matthews was elected representative by a clear majority over all, but the contest for the second place resulted in a tie, in which Messrs. Witcher and McWhorter received an even number of votes. It is intimated that Mr. Witcher will retire in favor of Mr. McWhorter. If he does not, the matter will have to come before the legislature.

THE Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, the organ of black-flag republicanism, has a business manager as well as an editor-in-chief. The business manager entered into a contract to enlighten his readers with the Mulligan letters at so much a line; which was a source of surprise to the editor-in-chief next morning, as well as a home thrust at the dodging candidate from Maine. Evidently the paths of republicanism are thorny.

EDITOR HANDY thinks that the democrats have the same chance of carrying Ohio as the republicans have of carrying West Virginia. As the democrats will carry the latter named state by a rousing majority editor Handy probably counts on the republicans making a clean sweep in Ohio. Ohio's going democratic in its state election would have the same annihilating effect on the republicans as would West Virginia to the democrats should it go republican. Ohio is a republican state, and, as such, should create no surprise by voting the republican ticket this month. West Virginia going democratic will have no effect in making republican hopes more gloomy than they now are. So, should Ohio go republican, the present bright prospects of the democracy will in no way be dulled. Cleveland and Hendricks will certainly be elected, and being elected will be inaugurated.

BLAINE'S FALSEHOODS.

We printed evidence yesterday going to show the ease with which the republican candidate can utter a falsehood when it suits his purpose to do so. Brother Blaine's entire course as a public man has been tortuous and unfortunate. He is a brilliant dodger, and his versatility consists in his absolute willingness to make an effort to conceal the truth. He has been convicted since the campaign opened of a number of falsehoods. His latest is in connection with his ownership of a share in the Hocking Valley mines.

There is nothing objectionable in the fact that he owns or has owned a share in these mines, but such is his habit of dodging and lying—there is no other word to fitly describe it—that he hastened to deny the charge before it was fairly made. He wrote a letter from Bar Harbor, which we printed yesterday, stating that he had never, at any time, owned a share in any coal, land, or iron company in the state of Ohio. This letter, as printed in THE CONSTITUTION, was accompanied by positive evidence that he had own- share in the Hocking Valley mines. It however, that Brother Blaine, by re- balance son of his personal magnetism, has found a man who is willing to make affidavit to the truth of his falsehood. A Mr. W. D. Lee hastens to write to the Tribune to say that Brother Blaine's Bar Harbor denial is true. But W. D. Lee goes goes on to say: "In 1880, I solicited Mr. Blaine, through the Hon. Thomas Ewing, my attorney, to subscribe for one share in what was known as the 'Hope furnace tract association,' for which he was to pay $25,000. This subscription was made and paid upon the condition that if at the end of two years Mr. Blaine should decide not to take the one share, then, upon notice to that effect, I agreed to refund the amount paid with 6 per cent interest, and the transaction should be regarded as a loan." At the end of two years, Lee goes on to say, "Mr. Blaine gave notice and got a promise of payment and $50,000 bonds of the Standard coal and iron company as collateral."

Now this proves too much. Either Lee is guilty of falsehood, or Mr. Blaine is guilty. The latter solemnly declares that he "never at any time," owned a share in any coal, iron or land company in Ohio, whereas Lee declares that he did for a period of two years have such share. Moreover, Brother Blaine held a receipt for the "payment in full" for one share in the association formed for the purchase of the lands known as the Hope Furnace tract." Brother Blaine is in the habit of making assertions utterly regardless of facts and when the mistaken zeal of his friends leads them to come to his rescue they fall into the pits his hands have dug for them.

Brother Blaine bought and paid for his Hocking Valley share in December, 1880. W. D. Lee says: "After the end of two years Mr. Blaine notified me he preferred not to take the share, and demanded repayment of the money, which I promised to make and give him security." This was in December, 1882. But, in May, 1882, Brother Blaine had received in exchange for his share $50,000 of the consolidated Hocking Valley bonds. Lee says these bonds were deposited by Mr. Brooks and himself as collateral security to secure the payment of the amount advanced to him by Mr. Blaine and for no other purpose, and are so held to-day." But why should Lee promise in December to give security that had already been given in May?

WISCONSIN AND MICHIGAN.

The Blaine people cannot this year concentrate their barrels and speakers and zeal in Ohio, or in any other one state; for there is uneasiness on that side of the house as to a considerable number of states, which have generally been claimed by the republicans. The republican managers are actively at work in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and California, and in Iowa and Kansas a good deal of work is being done. There is a lack of confidence as to each of the states named; and the fact that concentration of effort on the part of the republicans is this year out of the question, should give the democrats new hopes.

We have no space this morning for a review of the situation in the entire list of contested states; nor is such a review necessary as to many of them; but we do desire to call the attention of the readers to the condition of the canvass in two of them, namely, Wisconsin and Michigan.

In Wisconsin there are three full state, electoral and congressional tickets in the field—the democratic, republican and prohibition. Two years ago the democrats elected six out of nine congressmen, and during the past ten years the republican vote has gradually become uncertain. This year the democrats have nominated in one of the congressional districts a native of Norway, and placed on their state ticket a representative of the large Scandinavian population of the state; and if the defection among these people is half as large as reports call for, the republicans will be closely pressed in many counties. There is also a very considerable sprinkling of independents in the towns, particularly in Milwaukee. It is noticeable that many of the Wisconsin independents are stalwarts and friends of Mr. Roscoe Conkling. But the republicans fear much more the double fire they are exposed to on the liquor question. While the brewing interests and a large number of Germans are opposing them on the ground that their success involves the success of prohibition, the prohibitionists are fighting them, because they have not kept their promises and because of the dodgery that Mr. Blaine did in the Maine election. The Wisconsin prohibitionists are very stiff-backed and their candidate for governor, Mr. S. D. Hastings, of Madison, is one of the most uncompromising sort. He is a man of high character, and his supporters say they will give him twenty thousand votes. If they do, Cleveland will get the electoral votes of the state—eleven in number. They gave Hastings three years ago thirteen thousand votes, and the claim of twenty thousand now is not altogether unreasonable, on account of the growth of the anti-liquor sentiment throughout the west.

The situation in Michigan is not wholly dissimilar. There, too, the Germans are alarmed at republican supremacy, and there are a good many independents among republican merchants and professional men. Some of the most prominent republicans of Detroit openly express an intention to support the democratic candidates. The prohibitionists, too, are very emphatic and aggressive. The state once had a strict prohibitory law; it was repealed, however, and two years ago the republicans promised that the legislature then to be elected would submit to the people a prohibitory constitutional amendment. The republicans had a large majority in the legislature, but the proposition to submit the proposed amendment was voted down. The prohibitionists are on that account very angry and determined; they intend, so they say, to teach the republicans a lesson. Their nominee for governor is David Preston, a banker of Detroit, and the most prominent lay Methodist in the state. It is thought the Methodists will give him 5,000 votes beyond the prohibition vote, which will not be apt to fall below 15,000. There is of course a full prohibition electoral ticket, and Mr. St. John proposes to stump the state.

But the chief feature of the campaign is the fusion electoral ticket. Two years ago the democrats and greenbackers combined and elected Mr. Begole governor by a major- of 572. Governor Begole is again their and they have put in the field a fusion electoral ticket. Michigan has thirteen electoral votes. The fusionists have nominated a joint ticket of twelve electors, each wing nominating and supporting a separate thirteenth elector. The twelve electors then, if chosen, are to be divided for Cleveland and Butler proportionately to the vote for the two separate candidates. It thus becomes the interest of both wings of the opposition to vote for all of the twelve electors, and renders treachery and indifference most unlikely.

The democrats of the two states, who are conducting the campaign without seemingly much outside aid, are very confident—much more so than are their opponents. The republicans of Michigan are especially alarmed, and Mr. Blaine seems to have caught the prevailing distrust, for he has agreed to exhibit himself in the principal towns of the state.

IN THE BUSINESS WORLD.

There are two encouraging features at least in business matters—steel rails are in demand at an advance of two dollars a ton; and the gap between imports and exports is widening to our favor. When the immense corn crop of the northwest and the cotton crop are ready for shipment, the foreign trade of the country will be in a condition favorable for an influx of gold. Aside from these two facts it can not be said that business has greatly changed for the better. Merchants and bankers are still very cautious; the weather forbids free purchase of winter goods; the farmers who have wheat are unwilling to sell at present prices; the cotton goods trade is still unsatisfactory; politics and politicians are at fever heat, and falling values are still the fashion. Still there has been an improvement in mercantile business; orders are coming in and the best judges say the situation may now be regarded as one of mild encouragement. When consumers become satisfied that prices are down at bed-rock, as they seem to be, it is believed free and liberal purchases will be renewed. A little more accommodation among those who reap the lion's share of profits, would lift the pressure from the public, and start up trade. There is no reason for so prolonged a season of distrust.

PLURO-PNEUMONIA AT THE WEST.

There is considerable excitement in the west over pluro-pneumonia among the cattle. Several valuable herds have been destroyed. When the disease is established in a herd it renders worse than valueless all herds in the immediate vicinity. As far as we are informed the malady is confined to herds of the Jersey breed. It is said that it was carried to the west by cattle of this race from New York and Baltimore late last fall and these being in turn bought by other proprietors of Jersey herds disseminated the contagion, and thus it is, so far as is now known, confined to this breed. It is not a disease peculiar to Jersey cattle, however. It is a highly contagious disease, and cattle of any kind are subject to it, if they come in contact with it in any shape. It has existed for ages in Europe and Asia, and is so deeply rooted in places over there that it will continue as long as there comes cattle for it to live on. In this country it has been found in Pennsylvania, Maryland and in Kentucky, and the west. A Jersey breeder of the state of New York, who owned a large and valuable herd some years since ordered a cow from Maryland; it arrived in good order and from a healthy herd, but the disease showed itself in about sixty days, and finally ruined the herd. The supposition is that the disease was contracted on the route by traveling in a car in which a diseased animal had been carried perhaps months before. Our people should take every precaution to keep the disease out of our state. If it should get located here it would cost millions, and probably would never be rooted out. The greatest precaution should be taken to keep it out. The governor of Kansas has by proclamation prohibited the importation of Jersey cattle into that state to keep it out. The legislature of Georgia by stringent legislation should prohibit the importation of cattle from any territory that has been afflicted with the disease. It is an insidious and incurable and a very destructive malady.

BLAINE'S address to the people of the south, just issued from the branch office of the national republican committee at Nashville, is a waste of tatty. Mr. Blaine might as well issue an address to the people of England.

THE TRUTH newspaper of New York alludes to the tattooed Sun. This may be regarded as a rather harsh expression, but it is certain that there are some growing spots on the Sun's disc.

THE fact that Brother Blaine is a bigger fraud than Mrs. Hayes's husband is generally recognized by those who have any interest in the peace and welfare of our common country.

IF the republicans had any genuine enterprise they would mutilate Brother Blaine's church pew, and charge the democrats with committing another abominable outrage.

AFTER two months of a blistering, sizzling drought we are menaced by a new danger. When the fall rains set in the rank vegetation which has been rotting in the sultry sun will be carried by the rushing waters into the reservoirs and wells where it will develop germs of pestilence and disease. All this will promote the spread of fever, dysentery and perhaps cholera. For a month to come people cannot be too careful. They should wear heavy under-clothing, bathe often, avoid the night air, get plenty of sleep, boil their drinking water and use quinine in moderation. These precautions cannot do any harm, and may do much good.

BROTHER BLAINE has not yet read the Mulligan letters on the stump. He is too modest by half.

BROTHER BLAINE is praising up the old soldiers in Ohio. As Brother Blaine stayed in the rear when the trouble was going on, the probability is that he is grateful to those who were rash enough to rush to the front.

THE Indianapolis editor has got a little more fight in him than the Blaine gang suspected. He is fighting the libel suit with his bristles up.

IT may be taken for granted that Brother Blaine will engage in no more secret marriages. Two seem to be equal to a car-load.

IT is generally conceded that Brother Blaine has tried to make money out of every office he ever held.

A CIRCULAR from Austin W. Huntington, secretary of the "Sons of the Revolution," 55 Liberty street, New York, states that the "Sons" have taken in hand the subscription list to the statue of liberty, and have asked President Arthur to head a $1 subscription, and every man, woman and child in America is invited to send in $1 or more. It is proposed to raise a spontaneous offering of $125,000, in order to show that the people of the United States appreciate the magnificent gift of the Bartholdi statue from the people of France

WHAT passes for learning is greatly overrated. To much respect has been accorded to memorized learning, a mere knowledge of facts. Wisdom and skill does not necessarily follow vast acquisitions in the field of books, and the common sense embodied in the world's proverbs shows off to better advantage than the stilted essays of arrogant pedants. Many wise and skillful men who are doing work that lasts forever are not well acquainted with the novels, poetry and other literature of the present and past. And yet they should rank fully as well the toiling bookworms. There are able professional men, business men, farmers and artisans who are pronounced dull and ignorant because they are not familiar with several thousand pages of printed matter called "polite learning." But these persons are bright, adroit, capable, ingenious and full of resource. They are useful people, and the world is indebted to them for its material progress. Do they deserve a lower rank than men who invent nothing and produce nothing, and have no special distinction beyond the fact that they have memorized, and are able to use in speech and writing a certain number of facts and fancies contained in books? The mere scholar is a very unimportant factor. Unless he combines with his book knowledge considerable wordly wisdom and skill in some useful calling he is not and cannot be a positive and permanent benefit to mankind.

BROTHER BLAINE says he will push his Indianapolis libel suit just as vigorously as if he were a private citizen. Indeed! What is Brother Blaine but a private citizen? Private citizens who are frauds and rascals must be beaten at the polls.

THE personal magnetism of Brother Blaine now stands explained. He has the power of persuading his friends to back up his falsehoods by lies of their own. But they are very thin lies.

THE drummers of the United States held a convention in Louisville last Thursday night, and nominated Mr. Joseph Mulhatton for president and Mr. Z. T. Collier, of Ohio, for vice-president. The convention was very large, and represented 20,000 drummers. The platform adopted favors better railroad, hotel and livery-stable accommodations, the increase of drummers' salaries, free inter-state commerce, prohibition and an eight hour law, and opposes contract penitentiary labor. The drummers are in earnest, and claim that they can influence 4,000,000 votes. Their presidential candidate, Mr. Mulhatton, is well and favorably known as the biggest liar on the continent. Altogether, the ticket is a powerful one.

A BRANCH of the national republican committee has opened an office in Nashville, Tenn., and issued a long address to the people of the south. The address appeals to the southern people, irrespective of party, to support Mr. Blaine on account of his "broad and generous national views," and holds out the idea that under Blaine's administration the south would rapidly develop and prosper. The document is a miserable catch-penny affair, and is generally laughed at.

INSTEAD of going west, the probability is that Grover Cleveland will go to the white house. This is a great deal better than going on a tour of personal solicitation.

THE mosquitoes are heartily enjoying the hot weather. It is noticeable that they play an entirely new set of tunes on their bazoo.

IN this country we have settled down to the belief that drunkenness is responsible for the great body of crime. But it seems that some well posted authorities hold a very different view. Hon. Richard Vaux, of Philadelphia, after forty years of experience as a prison inspector, says that one-half of the criminals who came under his observation were total abstainers. Of 433 prisoners he found that only twenty-six were intemperate. General Mott, late keeper of the New Jersey state prison, claims that the majority of criminals were born with a criminal bias. He says that they are not drunkards and do not associate with that class, as the dangerous nature of their occupation requires cool, clear heads. A recent work entitled "Reforms, their Difficulties and Possibilities," states that an investigation of the records of a certain prison for a hundred years back shows that only three per cent of the prisoners were in the habit of using intoxicating liquor. The book also quotes the statement of a prison chaplain to the effect that out of the several hundred criminals under his care he did not know of one whose crime was the direct result of intemperance. These assertions are absolutely startling when we compare them with the sweeping statements to the contrary, made not only by many of our temperance reformers, but by judges of criminal courts. Fortunately we are not compelled to rely entirely upon printed statistics. There is probably not an intelligent citizen in any liquor drinking community who cannot from personal observation trace a large proportion of the crimes in his locality to intemperance. A few prison inspectors, chaplains and judges may bear different testimony, but the common experience of mankind rises up to contradict them.

WHEN Mr. Gladstone was in Scotland, he was greeted at Waverly Market with exceptional demonstrations of enthusiasm. Fifteen thousand men made the welkin ring with cheers as soon as Mr. Gladstone rose. The air was rent with the explosions of sound; the glass roof shook, and people held their hands over their ears to shut out the noise. The hurricane of cheers beat pitilessly against the galleries, and the excited faces and wild gesticulation of the crowd surpassed anything ever seen. Women cried without reserve, and the veteran statesmen on the platform were shaken like reeds in a storm. Even Mr. Gladstone was affected by this demonstration, but he was soon himself, and notwithstanding his seventy-five years his voice pealed out with all the sonorous force of an organ, making itself distinctly heard on the edges of the vast crowd. It was a great occasion, and a great man made himself equal to it by making a great speech.

POLITICAL NOTES.

IT is said that over three hundred political meetings a day are held in Indiana this week.

OVER five hundred independent republicans are enrolled on the club books of Chelsea, Mass.

ST. JOHN has no barrel. He pins his faith to the old open bucket that hangs in the well.

THE ten vice presidents of the Cleveland club of the New York stock exchange are five republicans and five democrats.

MRS. LOCKWOOD should see that Roscoe Conkling gets the vacant place beside her on the woman suffrage ticket. He is an Apollo, Belva dear.—Philadelphia Record.

FREDERICK GATES, chairman of the New York prohibition committee, gives an estimate of the vote of his party in that state. He sums it up by counties, and the total is a little rising 55,000.

THE independent republican address to the people of Wisconsin remarks that "the curious thing about Mr. Blaine's 'investments' is that he does not appear to have put any money into them."

IT is being recalled that Horace Greeley, as a presidential candidate, drew just as large and enthusiastic crowds as Blaine's are reported to be; that he made incomparably better speeches, and that he carried exactly six states.

HUGH J. GRANT, the Tammany nominee for mayor of New York, is now serving his second term in the board of aldermen. He is thirty-one years of age, and mainly noted for his opposition to the Broadway service railroad scheme.

TWO years ago Blaine subscribed $1,000 to the Garfield monument fund, but no portion of the money was paid until about ten days ago, when his visit to the grave was decided on, and Blaine forwarded the full amount to the committee.

GENERAL SLOCUM, of New York, expresses the opinion that Cleveland will carry that state. The republicans are already beginning to concentrate there strength there. Money is being raised for that state exclusively, and speakers are being drummed up. General Banks, of Massachusetts, who reached Washington last night en route to take the stump in Ohio, was ordered to New York to-day and left at once.

THE Connecticut town elections take place next Monday and a large vote is expected in consequence of the pending presidential election. The voters will also be called upon to express an opinion upon a constitutional amendment lengthening the terms of all the state officers to two years, and making sessions of the legislature biennial. A few years ago Connecticut voted down the latter proposition, but it is now submitted to the voters a second time.

THE New York Herald says: "Betting on the result of the presidential election among the members of the stock exchange is increasing at an extraordinary rate. A great many bets of $1,000, $2,000 and $5,000 each have already been made. In most instances the wagers have been even on Cleveland against Blaine, but lately the backers of Blaine have demanded odds. Two or three bets of $1,000 to $750 that Cleveland will carry this state has been made. A bet of $1,000 even was made yesterday that Cleveland would carry the state by 25,000 plurality. Addison Cammack, the veteran broker, has been freely backing with his money his opinion that Cleveland would be elected."

PERSONAL INTELLIGENCE.

THE Celestial Empire says that the king of Siam has 203 children. He is under thirty.

KATE BLAKE, the latest evolved English beauty, pushes her professional pretensions to the position solely on her pure complexion.

PATTI will sing in none but the larger cities this year. Towns whose assessed valuation is less than the price of seats will have no chance to hear her.

AN American, who saw Gladstone in Edinburgh at his recent visit, reports him as looking vigorous and apparently, ready for the autumn session coming.

EDWIN BOOTH will occupy his new and beautiful house on Chestnut street, in Boston, early in October, and in view of his residence he has been proposed for membership in two or three of the leading local clubs.

SENATOR MORRILL, of Vermont, is now 74 years of age, says the Troy Times, the oldest member of the senate, but a much younger looking man than Senator Edmunds, who is his junior by some 18 years. The state of Vermont now furnishes the oldest senator in years and the oldest in term of office, and is the only state that holds its united representation in the senate of eighteen years ago.

MRS. JAMES G. BLAINE is said to be very much opposed to public white house receptions. She often condemned the receptions of Mrs. Rutherford B. Hayes's reign, and on one occasion speaking of them is reported as having said: "No doubt they were popular, but a great many common people go there, and we want things a little more different now. We want people to be made to esteem it a privilege to be permitted to go to the white house."

SOME twelve years or so ago General J. Bankhead Magruder, at one time during the war in command of the trans-Mississippi department of the southern army, died in reduced circumstances in the city of Houston, Texas. A short time after death the remains, with a great flourish of trumpets, were removed to Galveston and placed in the private vault of Sexton Cahill, to remain temporarily, until the construction of a suitable monument. Like many other projected enterprise, the monument came to naught, and all that was mortal of the once beau-sabreur of the southern cross still rest in that modest vault through the tender heart of a veteran Texan, who yearly pays a small fee.

DR. HUNTER MCGUIRE, medical director on Stonewall Jackson's staff, says the general had, as if by miracle, escaped wounds until at Chancellorsville, when it seemed his guardian angel deserted him, for he was struck by three bullets in quick succession. The first went through the right hand, lodging under the skin. The next entered the left forearm just below the elbow and came out near the wrist, completely shattering both bones. This was followed by an ounce ball crashing through the left arm near the shoulder, severing an important artery. To add to the catastrophe his horse took fright and dashed madly through the timber before he could get the reins gathered up in his left hand.

THE increase of interest in athletic sports has been the means of making small fortunes for their devotees. A well known athlete has approximated for us the following: Charles E. Courtney, $20,000 in rowing; Edward Hanlan, $80,000, same; Wallace Ross, $70,000, same; Hosier and Teemer, each $5,000 to $10,000, same; John L. Sullivan, $150,000, in slugging; Billy Madden, $15,000, same, Joe Coburn, $20,000, same; John Morrisey and Jem Mace made several fortunes, which they lost in gambling; Weston made $30,000, pioneer pedestrian of the world; other pedestrians—Rowell, $80,000; Ennis and Fitzgerald, $15,000 each; Harding, $7,000; Harriman, $10,000; Duncan C. Ross cleared $80,000 in wrestling matches.

IN Vermont drinking men use lithographic prescriptions for cocktails. They read as follows: "R.—Spir. Frumenti, 2 fl. oz.—Ext. Angos. ½ dr.—Syr. Simp. ½ fl. oz." They are put up by druggists, who charge from 20 to 50 cents a prescription.

THERE are over twelve thousand men and boys employed all the year round in the North sea fisheries. It is said they are rapidly becoming demoralized by the presence of "coopers," or floating grogshops that accompany the fishing fleets, and missionary efforts are being made to counteract the growing evil.

THE assessment rolls of the state of Texas for 1884 show the number of cattle in the state to be about seven millions, an increase over 1883 of about half a million. The valuation is placed at a little over $84,000,000, an increase over 1883 of $1,500,000. The cattle business was never more prosperous in Texas, despite the prediction of damage by the fence law, which Governor Ireland is vigorously enforcing.

IMMENSE shipments of flour are being made from San Francisco to China, as well as canned goods, salted meats and other provisions. The shipments are mainly to Chinese merchants in Hong Kong, which leads to the supposition that they are made on behalf of the Chinese government, in anticipation of a long war. It is estimated that no less than 8,000,000 pounds of flour was shipped during September.

THE astonishing report comes from St. Paul, Minn., the center of the buffalo trade, that the entire "catch" of buffalo robes this season is only four. Last year it was ten thousand, and in 1881 it was one hundred thousand. The last named figures explain the first. The extension of the Northern Pacific railroad let in the hunters on the great buffalo ranges of the northwest, and a reckless slaughter followed, resulting in the practical extermination of the animal. A few scattered herds still linger in the more inaccessible regions, but as a race they have become extinct.

MATTERS IN MACON.

A GOOD COLORED CITIZEN CUT AND NEARLY KILLED.

The Inquest Over Young Skipper--The Public Library--Cool Burglars--A Badge Thief--The Pierian Dance--The Mercer Scholarship--General Mention of Matters, Etc.

MACON, October 4.—[Special.]—This afternoon late, Cotten avenue was the scene of much excitement, made so by a cutting affray in front of the store of W. G. Johnson, the colored grocer, corner of Poplar street. In the affair Johnson was severely knifed by another negro named George Walker.

Ben Jackson, a brick mason, was settling with hands in front of the store. Johnson was standing on the edge of the sidewalk talking to Amos Bullard. When Walker was paid off Johnson asked him to settle his bill over due. A war of words followed when Walker with an oath plunged his knife into the right side of Johnson. The wounded man was taken into his store and a physician called, who gave him relief. Walker ran, and was caught by Lieutenant Wylie and placed in the barracks. Johnson was badly cut, and the wound would have been serious, but for the knife striking a rib. He was taken home in a hack. The wounded man is a quiet, good citizen, and his friends regret the matter exceedingly. He is one of the most prosperous colored men in Macon and has many white friends.

The Skipper Inquest.

THE JURY RETURNS A VERDICT OF VOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER.

MACON, October 4.—[Special.]—Coroner William Hodnett was summoned to Rutland district last night to hold an inquest over the remains of young Skipper, whose death was telegraphed last night. After a thorough investigation the coroner's jury returned a verdict of voluntary manslaughter. The coroner arrested young Welsh this morning. He was released by Judge Simmons on his making a bond for five hundred dollars. Hon. Chas. Bartlett represented the defendant.

He said this afternoon: "I am positive that Skipper was shot while playing with that boy. Who ever heard of convicting a boy for such a crime, when the positions of the two where they held the gun would have made it impossible for Welsh to have shot him."

The Public Library.

MACON, October 4.—[Special.]—At a recent meeting of the Macon public library, four new members were added. Collections for the month September, $63.09; books added, 17 volumes; books circulated, 95. The institution is in a good condition, with plenty of money in the treasury and growing daily more popular. Librarian Herbert is a host, and is building it up finely.

Cool Burglars.

MACON, Ga., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Last night about eleven o'clock, as officer Dan Thomas and Charles Moseley were walking their beat they saw suspicious looking characters coming from the ice house of Mr. J. M. Boardman, in rear of the car shed. They approached, and discovered that the ice houses of Messrs. Felix Corput and Boardman had been entered and robbed from the former. Some money was taken from the latter. A pistol, pair of pants and a pair of cuff buttons has been stolen. The thieves made good their escape.

A Negro with a Badge.

MACON, October 4.—[Special.]—To-day when the negro boy, Harry Hardeman, was carried before Judge Freeman charged with stealing, on his person was discovered a gold monogram badge with the initials M. A. L. Above it in a scroll in one end was the letter W, in the center the numbers 42 are engraved; on each corner the letter P; a gold pin extends through. He claimed to have bought it from a negro named John Jarret for 50 cents. He was held on a charge of larceny, and the pin placed in the hands of an officer for identification of the owner.

The Purim Dance.

MACON, October 4.—[Special.]—A few weeks ago the young men of the city organized a dancing club for the purpose of giving a series of entertainments this winter. Last night the club gave its first entertainment at Masonic hall, and a delightful evening was passed. A number of strangers were present and added much to the pleasure of the evening. The music was furnished by Kessler's band.

The Mercer Scholarships.

MACON, October 4.—[Special.]—To-day eight young men entered a competitive examination for the city scholarship of Mercer university. The successful young men were Walker Freeman, Robert Hodges and Willie Dunwoody. Three young men that will do honor to themselves and the city at this well known institution.

Personal Mention.

MACON, October 4.—[Special.]—Mr. Harry Willingham leaves to-morrow for Vicksburg, where he accepts a position as auditor's clerk in the office of the L. N. O. T. railroad.

The case of Mathews, who cut the negro boy so severely some time ago, was called before the recorder this morning. It was concluded on account of non-appearance of witness of defense. The wounded negro appeared in court.

A negro boy named Harry Hardeman stole $8.75 from Chip Lane's bar. A negro from Jones county was the victim. He was arrested and placed in the barracks.

A moke named Sam Cooper stole keys from Mr. J. J. Flanders, and was nabbed.

The mortuary report this week showed an unusual number of deaths; whites 4, colored 9; total 13.

Mr. Lewis Nelson, the efficient officer of Judge Freeman's court who was so severely cut by the negro Green Franklyn, a few days since, is out today for the first time.

There is much interest taken in the state go-as-you-please match at the park during the fair. To-day Prater and Baker, of Atlanta, entered. Orr is still trying to get in, but Manager Clay says he cannot but will consider offering a special purse for him.

WYNTON.

Resolutions on Captain Flynn's Death.

ATLANTA, Ga., October 4, 1884.—At a meeting of the mechanics of the Western and Atlantic railroad shops, held this day, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Death has invaded our ranks and taken from our number our much beloved and honored master mechanic, Captain John H. Flynn, it is with bowed heads and weeping hearts that we are called upon to express our sorrow in the keen loss we feel in being deprived of him who was a faithful friend to each of us and whose counsel we received at tenderly as from a father. To say that we miss him is but a shade of the true expression of our sad hearts. He is gone and in view of the long and intimate relations which he has sustained to us as master mechanic to us, during which time his many noble traits of character, his sympathy, kindness, forgiving spirit has been shown to us in many ways and have greatly endeared him to us.

Therefore be it resolved, That in the death of Captain John H. Flynn the western and Atlantic railroad has lost a faithful servant, the employes in the shops a devoted friend, and the community a good and valuable citizen.

Resolved, That those of us who have known him so long and intimately, loved and appreciated him with our whole souls, and his being taken from us will leave a void which only He who rules all our destinies can heal.

Resolved, That his many noble deeds will ever live green in our hearts, and we who were nearest to him will ever cherish and honor his memory.

Resolved, That we deeply and tenderly sympathize with his family in this their hour of affliction, and we devotedly commend them to Him who is a comforter and shield to the widowed and the fatherless.

Resolved, That these resolutions be transmitted to the family of the deceased as a token of our respect and veneration of a lovable character, of a good man gone to his rest, and of the interest felt by his people in those he loved and cherished best.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished THE CONSTITUTION for publication. [Signed.] M. L. Collier, chairman; Wm. Kinyon, J. P. Kinyon, B. S. Ivy, M. Dawson, J. F. Lee, Geo. Welch, Jos. Crabe, J. A. LaFontaine, A. Q. Adams, S. A. Orr, J. A. Forsyth.

Nicholson--Adair.

On Thursday evening, September 25, at half-past seven o'clock, Mr. L. D. Nicholson and Miss Maggie E. Adair went to the parsonage of the Rev. J. W. Bowden and were married. The affair was secret but each one having so many confidants it soon became known publicly, and now they desire it published for the benefit of their acquaintances.

Gone to Get Well.

Mr. Henry W. Grady, who has been confined to his bed for some time by an obstinate fever, left yesterday afternoon for the Peters farm in Gordon county, where he will rest and recuperate for a few days. He was accompanied by his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Peters.

COWARDLY BLAINE.

COWARDICE THE RULING TRAIT OF HIS CHARACTER.

The Handwriting on the Wall Which Has Already Stricken with Consternation Belshazzar Blaine --The Fate of a Feast of Twenty-Five Years, Which will Now be Ended.

TO THE CONSTITUTION: Men judge actions by events, and the people of this country will judge Mr. Blaine by no more than they know of him—and to this end he himself has furnished the facts by which to render judgment.

In summing up the evidence, one trait stands out in painful prominence above all the rest, namely, his weakness in temptation and his capacity to shield his own home and domestic relations—in other words he is a coward—a moral coward. Brilliant in intellect, but deficient in honor. He may possess the brute force of a vulgar hero—and he might rescue some of his family from a burning building; but he lacks the firm resolve of virtue and of reason—and he (Mr. Blaine) has revealed his own weakness and incapacity. In this connection your correspondent would call the attention of the honest republicans of Georgia to this failure in Mr. Blaine's character, and would beg them to consider the risk they run in supporting the republican ticket because of their old-time attachment to republicanism. The writer is not one of those who would turn a cold shoulder to any man who fails to agree either in politics or in religion.

There are men in Georgia who any party in America might be glad to claim—that have uniformly voted the national republican ticket since the war. They are gentlemen in conduct and feeling. To these I would direct a word—a kind word. Of these gentlemen—so trustworthy in all the relations of human life—the writer would ask a candid hearing—not that their failure to vote the republican ticket this year would influence the result in Georgia, but that they may cast their votes on the side of official honesty; or failing to vote, that they may rebuke a nomination which has put American civilization on trial—that they may show their children and neighbors that they take no part in this perilous debauchery of public sentiment.

The intelligence and virtue of Boston and New York have spoken in unmistakable terms. Their revolt at Chicago has been justified by new evidences of Mr. Blaine's unworthiness, and unless the republican party has resolved to sink everything—their official and personal honesty and virtue in an effort for partisan success," Mr. Blaine will be rejected at the polls. Party discipline should be powerless against the convictions of men; and honest men should vote for honest men—or maintain their self-respect by omitting to vote for a candidate whose dishonesty is a matter of proof—no matter how often such a one may secure a nomination for office. Genuine patriotism makes this action imperative.

Every candid man and woman in the United States is compelled to admit a vital weakness in Mr. Blaine's character, when the amazing correspondence with Fisher and Caldwell is read. His readiness to prostitute his official power and his own admission of the same, has no parallel in the history of this union. To have trafficed as his letters show and then to beseech a friend to perjure and stultify himself, is something lower and deeper than has ever been recorded. Benedict Arnold betrayed his country for money and shame made him flee to another land, but Mr. Blaine was ready and willing to instigate Tom Scott and Fisher to set up a dubious national bank, thereby forfeiting all respect for himself, when it is recollected he, as speaker, was to rule and further such legislation; and not content with this prostitution of his high office, he brazenly rose in the house of representatives and denied any connection with Tom Scott to this point; it was the growth of years—did not suddenly. The heart that could entertain such dishonorable intentions had educated itself to this point; it was the growth of years—the outcropping of a life time of deceit and avarice. Go back to his early life and watch his first recorded actions and motives, and you may trace the weakness up until the present time. Was he not a coward and a victim of irresolution, when he permitted a secret marriage in Kentucky, thus exposing a trusting woman to countless annoyances and perplexities? Did he not betray his selfish cowardice in this matter?

But you may say he was only eighteen, and youth is an impudent. Grant the fact, but when he became the purchaser of a lawful license for his wife's sister, Sarah Stanwood, scarcely three months later, will you tell me that an honest, upright man, could excuse himself an hour after words for selling to purchase another license, by which he sought repair the wrong already done, and give to Harriet Stanwood's good name and character the same protection he was careful to furnish to Sarah Stanwood."

There is food for thought in this matter.

The Kentucky law was strict, and I affirm he knew his duty and he did it not, when he postponed another marriage service until nearly a year after the first was secretly contracted. Whatever excuse was or was not, it is settled he was a coward to his trusting wife, and Mr. Blaine tells the facts.

Mrs. Blaine is not on trial here or elsewhere, and her patience and conjugal duty speak loudly for themselves that she has made such an admirable wife and mother.

He was again a coward in repeating that secret marriage in Pennsylvania—scarcely three months before the birth of the hapless babe, whose tombstone even was not spared in the evils that came of this great error of Mr. Blaine's early life.

In his own sworn testimony we find he left this wife in Pittsburg, hastening back to Kentucky, while she took her way alone to her brother in New York, and from thence to far-off Maine at a time when Pullman sleepers and the luxuries of fast railroad travel were unknown to the world. Will any man of average sensibility dare to defend such cowardice? Who but a coward would have failed to go to Maine? Many of us have a meagre knowledge of politics and statesmanship, but no household in America can fail to sympathize with that lonely home coming of Mrs. James G. Blaine; to be absent from her liege lord until her babe was nine months old, all the time harrassed with unexplained secret marriages—and the anxious cases of maternity.

In this cowardly retreat to Kentucky—you find the germ of the same nature—which plead with Fisher, for a "car racter" to read aloud in the house of representatives.

Let any upright reader of THE CONSTITUTION render the verdict, and tell you if the eighteen-year-old boy was not the forerunner of "the mature age of fifty-four." The bloom bore its fruit. In the next place, he was a coward, in selling Fisher's railroad bonds to his friends in Maine—secretly. Remember these men had elected him to congress—had generously advocated his claims to republican support,—ignorant of his crafty treachery, and innocent of his lack of official integrity. "Who purposely cheats his friend would cheat his God." History never recorded a more despicable creature than the author of the letter to Fisher, in which he said, "No one shall ever know from me that I have sold a bond in Maine." No wonder Mrs. Lot Morrill, whom the writer knows to be a lady who adorned her high position with grace and honor, denounces the trickster!

The question comes up just here: What security have his present supporters in the republican party that Mr. Blaine is not now at the present time betraying their best interests, as he betrayed Lot M. Morrill? It is declared without contradiction, that Mr. Blaine never ceased to importune Mr. Morrill for political services, so long as Mr. Fisher concealed the proofs of his trickery!

Like Judas, he added treachery to his avarice and cowardice.

Judging his future by his past, what hope has the country under such domination?

Who is able to answer for his fidelity to the supporters, who are now endeavoring to run the republican party—per se—putting aside the candidate, as a lead to be carried? Sift his conduct to these friends in Maine, in regard to the selling of Fort Smith and Little Rock bonds, and his pitiful admission to Fisher that he "would do whatever he wished him to do," and there is nothing good left but your disgust for his cowardice and treachery. Yet he was such a poltroon that he lied before congress, and said "every transaction was open as the day!" His cowardice never assumed a more contemptible phase than when he plead with Fisher to sign a falsehood in his behalf that he might make it appear in congress that he was innocent of fraud and dishonesty. No brave man could stomach such an effort as that appeal to Fisher.

Fisher had used the plainest language to Mr. Blaine. In common English he had pronounced him a liar and advised him to make peace with the Inquisition of unrighteousness before it is too late; but in spite of all these rebukes Mr. Blaine continues to entreat, "My dear Mr. Fisher." "My kind regards to Mrs. Fisher," at a time when dissected honesty would have kicked Fisher out of his office, or when the average swindler would have fled the country.

He was a pitiful coward in bullying the Indianapolis Sentinel by which he invited and demanded investigation into his household secrets.

In the light of his putrid confession to Wm. Walter Phelps, and his disastrous replies to certain interrogatories, there is no excuse whatever in instituting any libel suit, or legal investigation, or for laying bare his family affairs.

Was it his coarse nature—which will ever bear the marks of coarseness? What else can explain it?

In the name of decency, why did he not ignore the Indianapolis Sentinel, take the broad ground that the affairs of his household were sacred—in which the public had no right to meddle—and by so doing forever enlist in his own behalf the tender relations of every domestic life and the sanctity of every American home?

Alas! alas! for his family. He openly invited investigation by his libel suit; uncovered to fifty millions of people what must painfully mortify his children and wantonly humiliate their mother, and which has pictured himself (drawn by his own hand) as a weak, cowardly young man, and a selfish, cowardly, old one.

Being aware of these secret marriages—regretting at "fifty-four" the folly of eighteen years—if he felt impelled to speak, why did he not say "tell the truth" at the first outset, and thus shelter those whose destinies are so bound up with his own? There can be but one explanation, namely—his cowardly nature sought devices and flattered itself that somebody would do what Fisher declined to do—exonerate Mr. Blaine at the expense of truth and honor, for the sake of the party that nominated him.

Look at Mr. Blaine, as delineated by his own pen and by his own admissions, and there can be but a single conclusion as to his moral character. It remains to be seen whether the republican party is so strong in money, in office holding power, in a long possession of the strongholds of the government, that it can continue itself in office without a candidate for president, or to speak more properly, handicapped with a candidate which has covered it with confusion and threatens it with overthrow.

To the good men in Georgia—who differ with the democratic party—to the honest republicans, who are so true and so patriotic to their own families and to their country, these things must be painful—aye shameful.

With such a man as Senator Edmunds in the ranks, whose nomination would have been an honor to the party and the country—it must sting—like a serpent's tooth—to be compelled to vote for Blaine or refuse to vote a republican ticket.

She Was "Afeard" He'd Stop.

From the Chicago Tribune.

A young woman from the country was suing her ex-sweetheart for breach of promise, and the lawyers were, as usual, making all sorts of inquisitive interrogatories.

"You say," remarked one, "that the defendant frequently sat very close to you?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply, with a beetle flush.

"How close?"

"Close enough, so's one cheer was all the sittin' room we needed."

"And you say he put his arm around you?"

"No, I didn't."

"What did you say, then?"

"I said he put both arms around me."

"Then what?"

"He hugged me."

"Very hard?"

"Yes, he did. So hard that I came purty near hollerin' right out."

"Why didn't you holler?"

"'Cause."

"That is no reason. Be explicit, please. Because what?"

"'Cause I was afeard he'd stop."

The court fell off the bench and had to be carried out and put under the hydrant for the purpose of resuscitation.

THE CODE DUELLO.

SONE INTERESTING FEATURES OF THE CASH-SHANNON DUEL.

A Remarkable Fact Connected with the History o Duelling. The Danger of the Man with the Name of the Fewest Syllables. Colonel Cash's Downfall. "Fist and Skull."

Special Correspondence of THE CONSTITUTION.

CHERAW, S. C., October 3.—While my first letter contained an illustration of the shakspearean truism, "There are stranger things in heaven and earth; Horatio, than thy vain philosophy e'er dreamt on," the present communication, though furnishing an additional example of the wisdom of the observation, will also call in question the soundness of another familiar maxim of the bard of Avon, "There's nothing in a name." In fact an exemplification of the one, and a verification of the other, both meet in some peculiar and interesting circumstances connected with the famous Cash-Shannon duel.

This duel was fought on Lynch's creek, in Darlington, the county contiguous to both. Its origin is familiar to your readers. But from my informant already mentioned, a friend and neighbor of Colonel Cash, and from others in the community, I elicited some curious facts which have not heretofore appeared in print. Elderby, it appears, the brother-in-law of Colonel Cash, had a difficulty with some negro on his place, in which he inflicted upon him a severe castigation. A suit for damages was the result, and Shannon and DuPas, of Camden, were the attorneys for the prosecution. Elderby, to avoid a judgment which was likely to obtain, it is said, made over his property to his sister, Mrs. Cash. The prosecution, claiming that the transaction was a fraudulent one in order to set aside the judgment, instituted a plea accordingly. The papers, it seems, were prepared by DuPas and filed away in the same pigeon hole—one for the court and one with private notes for his own use. Colonel Cash soon after visited Camden, and calling on DuPas asked to see a copy of the papers. DuPas readily assented, and without forethought, drawing out the one intended for his own use, handed it to Cash, who, after reading it, remarked that it contained certain statements referring to the private notes which reflected upon the honor of his wife, and immediately challenged him. The challenge was accepted by DuPas. Cash appeared promptly on the field at the time and place appointed, when it was announced that DuPas had been arrested by the authorities. It is stated that Cash then accused Dupas of cowardice in having himself intentionally arrested. Whereupon, Blair, a prominent politician and friend of DuPas, proposed to take his place, which, however, Cash declined, either on account of his friendship for Blair, or from motives which may hereafter appear. Cash, with the exception of Blair, who it is said could discharge every barrel of his revolver in quick succession, putting every bullet in the same hole, was the best shot in the state. He then proceeded to annoy Shannon until he forced from him a challenge, thus giving himself the choice of weapons, and thus on the field of honor the life-blood of Shannon atoned for the mistake of DuPas.

Before the shooting of Boggan Cash, her son, Mrs. Cash departed to that borne from whence no traveler returns. And the strangest part of the story is that the Elderby papers were never canceled or returned, and that Elderby is now trying to recover the property, which by her death passed to the heirs of Mrs. Cash.

There is doubtless no man in the state more familiar with the code duello than Colonel Cash. My informant states that while a guest at his house Colonel Cash exhibited his famous duelling pistol, and in discussing the history of the code gave the details of every noted duel that has occurred.

"He has it all at his tongue's end. On that very night," said he, "Colonel Cash informed me of a singular coincidence in the history of duelling, which is certainly a remarkable fact."

"And what is that?" I asked.

"Well," he continued, knocking the ashes from his cigar, "on that very night Colonel Cash stated to me as a fact, and I believe he knows, that there has not been a single duel fought in the United States, where either of the principals was killed, which has not been attended in one particular by the same uniform result."

"And what is that?" I repeated.

"Why," said he, "the man with the shorter name is sure to kill his opponent."

"Do you refer to the number of letters?" I inquired.

"Not to the number of letters," he replied. "But to the number of syllables in the name. The man have the fewer number of syllables in his name alway kills his antagonist. Colonel Cash can give you the history of every one of them, back to the time of Burr and Hamilton, and beyond that, I presume, to the first duel on record, where the three-syllabled champion of the Philistines, Goliath, fell at the hands of the youthful David. And I don't think you will find an exception to the rule."

During the interval of silence that followed, your correspondent endeavored to recall all the noted duels that had come under his own observation, but failed to find a single exception. As it is said, however, that there is no rule without its exception, perchance some of your readers may be able to find one. And might it not be well for those interested in the code to paste this in their hats? If the challenged party has the greater number of syllables in his name, he will promptly decline. If less than his opponent, he can safely challenge and let his antagonist decline. Thus by measuring names instead of swords, he can settle these affairs of honor without resorting to that false standard of courage which has been handed down from feudal ages.

As a corollary to this. Should a duel occur between two parties whose names were composed of the same number of syllables, I. Nither would be killed, or 2, both would be killed.

The chances are evidently equal. And if the rule were made a criterion and asserted in the code, both parties could always honorably avoid the result, unless both, with suicidal intent, were bent on leaving this sublunary sphere. Might not this fact have had some weight in inducing Colonel Cash to decline the challenge of Blair?

The various accounts of Colonel Cash, which have been given to the public, have been greatly exaggerated. He is essentially a descendant of the old South Carolina chivalry; and while he regards the "fist and skull" method of avenging an insult with no favor, he delights rather in resorting to the code duello as the only standard in settling an affaire d'honneur. Though of a domineering spirit, he is said to have been a good neighbor and kind host, and given to acts of charity. He is now approaching "the sere and yellow leaf"—an imbittered old man of sixty years, and it is thought his mind is seriously impaired.

The commencement of his downfall is attributed to that unfortunate duel, which resulted as duels generally do from a very insignificant cause.

Out of the Jaws of Death

Mr. John Pearson's Statement.

In the spring of 1882 I was attacked with a very bad cough, which continued to grow worse until fall, when I got so weak that I could not get about. I tried a great many kinds of medicine, but continued to grow worse. I was notified that I had consumption, and would probably die. Dr. Holloway finally told me to try Brewer's Lung Restorer. They sent to Ward's store and got a bottle, and I commenced taking it right away. After taking two or three doses I began to improve, and by the time I had used up one bottle I was able to get on my feet again. I am now in excellent health. I am confident that the Lung Restorer saved my life, and my neighbors are of the same opinion. It is the best Lung Remedy ever made, in my opinion. Dr. H. promised me that he would write to the manufacturers and tell them of the wonderful cure it made in my case.

Statement of Mr. Benj. F. Hearndon.

Early in November, 1881, while sewing on the machine, my wife was taken with a severe pain in her side, which was soon followed by hemorrhages from her lungs and a severe cough. Fever commenced; she could neither eat or sleep, and in a few weeks she was reduced to a living skeleton. The attending physician told me that he thought one of her lungs was entirely gone. She could not retain the most delicate nourishment on her stomach. I then agreed with Dr. Sullivan, my family physician, to call Dr. Holloway in consultation. They made a final examination of the patient and pronounced the case hopeless. Dr. Holloway then suggested the Brewer's Lung Restorer as a last resort. I sent for a bottle and gave her a dose. I found that she could retain it on her stomach, and after about the third dose I began to notice some improvement in her condition. I continued the medicine regularly, and by the time she had taken two bottles she was able to walk about the house. She is now in better health than she has enjoyed for several years. I believe the Lung Restorer saved her life. We have a family of six children, and some of them grown.

Mr. Hearndon's postoffice is Yatesville, Upson county, Ga. He is a thoroughly reliable man in every particular.

Bonds, Stocks and Money.

CONSTITUTION OFFICE,
ATLANTA, October 4, 1884.

Quietness has prevailed for the past week, offerings and demand being very meagre. The future looks well enough, except that the long dry season has cut the cotton crop off to a considerable extent. Receipts at this point are increasing as the season advances, but unless the price is well maintained the amount realized from the crop will fall short of expectations.

Prices of securities are unchanged, except in Central railroad stock, which is firm at better figures.

Georgia railroad dividend of 2½ per cent is payable on the 15th instant, up to which time the transfer books are closed and the stock is quoted ex-dividend. Western railroad of Alabama bonds are ex October coupon.

Money is in limited supply at 10@12 per cent.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Features of the Speculative Movements in Grain and Produce.

By telegraph to The Constitution.

CHICAGO, October 4—The corn market was the center of attraction on 'change to-day. The bulls secured a stronger grip, owing to light receipts and wet weather, and the shorts had to pay for their experience. The latter figured on new corn grading in November and the former thought differently. October option did nothing very much, but the other futures advanced with rapidity, and the demand to fill shorts made trading lively. For November the closing figures 24 hours ago was 50¾c; to-day the opening figure was 52c with a few sales later at 51¾c. Then there was a jump to 54¾c and afterwards a drop to 54c, closing at 53@53¼c.

The wheat market was again dull. The bulls seemed to have lost courage, while the other class of traders were timid. Weakness was the prevailing feature on account of large receipts at Toledo and other points, and prospects of liberal arrivals here next week, owing to the recent flow of currency to the country. Prices receded 1½c—No. 2 for November opened at 80¼c and ranged at 79@80⅜c, closing at 79@79½c.

Oats, rye and barley were firm and steady, showing no appreciable change.

Pork and lard closed about the same as yesterday.

THROUGH THE CITY.

EVENTS OF INTEREST GATHERED UP ABOUT TOWN.

Happenings Here and There—in the Courts, at the Capitol, Around the Station House and on the Street—Minor News Notes Caught Up on the Sidewalk—Gossip in the Gutters.

FANNY SCOTT was given a cell in the city prison yesterday upon a warrant charging her with the larceny of a pair of shoes.

SAM HOWARD was arrested yesterday upon a warrant charging him with the larceny of a set of harness from Dr. Miller.

DR. W. C. SMITH'S residence was entered by a burglar night before last and about forty dollars in cash stolen from the doctor's pocket.

NIGHT before last a burglar entered Mr. WM. HODSON'S residence on Mitchell street and stole a clock, a coat and vest and a small amount of money.

A THIEF tried to enter Captain Bob Boyd's residence on Poplar street day before yesterday. Mrs. Boyd locked the house up and went visiting. When she returned she found an old key broken off in the front door lock, showing how a burglar tried to enter the house.

FOR the past few days Mr. John Neal has been steadily improving. He has gained strength steadily and is in very cheerful spirits. A great change has occurred in his condition during the past week and strong hopes for his complete recovery are now entertained.

MRS. H. M. CARPENTER'S five year old son left his home on Hunter street yesterday morning while the circus procession was passing and had not been found up to midnight last night, notwithstanding the fact that the police department was on the lookout, and a diligent search was made by the parents.

FESTIVAL OF TABERNACLES.

A Jewish Holiday—Its Origin and its Significance—Services at the Synagogue.

From the setting of the sun last Friday to the going down thereof yesterday, transpired one of the festivals observed by the children of Israel the world over—the Festival of the Tabernacles. It is a season of thanksgiving and rejoicing. The law authorizing and ordering this observance is found in the 23d chapter of Leviticus, verses 33 and 43, and reads as follows: "On the fifteenth day of the seventh month shall be the Feast of Tabernacles unto the Lord. Ten shall do no servile work therein. When ye have gathered in the fruit of the land, ye shall keep a feast upto the Lord seven days. On the first day shall be a Sabbath, on the eighth day shall be a Sabbath. And ye shall take unto ye the fruit of the tree bodar, branches of the palm tree and the boughs of the mytle tree and the willows of the brook; and ye shall rejoice before the Lord seven days. It shall be a statute forever unto your generations.

In the Jewish communities of Europe, where the old forms of worship are strictly adhered to, these tabernacles are temporary structures erected on the premises of each family, and are used for religious exercises during the entire week. In these temporary houses, the head of the household offers his tribute to God for his manifold blessings to him and his. The decorations of fruits, evergreens, and flowers which adorn his tabernacle speak to him of the beneficence of God. The services at such places refer to the humble abode as teaching humility and reminding the faithful Jew and his family that their forefathers dwelt in such tabernacles in the wilderness for many years while their sins kept them from the promised land. They are warned against the violation of the holy commandments, and are made to feel that their temporary tabernacle is but a symbol of their pilgrimage on earth, and that by good deeds and steadfast faith they may at last exchange it for an eternal tabernacle above.

In most of the synagogues in this country the service has been greatly modified, though it suggests the same thoughts as are set forth in the antique forms of worship. At the Atlanta synagogue there was an appropriate service Friday night. Yesterday the congregation gathered again. Dr. Jacobson delivered a lecture, embodied many beautiful thoughts suggested by the day, and made an appeal to his hearers to take its lessons home to their hearts and to embody them in their conduct. The music, as usual, was fine.

A SUDDEN DEATH.

Mr. C. J. Smith Dies Suddenly at His Residence 35 Luckie Street.

MR. C. J. Smith died suddenly yesterday at his home, 35 Luckie Street. About two weeks ago he was taken sick with something like general debility, for which he took medicene, but continued to transact his business and did not go to bed. Night before last he was at home and had a fainting spell. He terempon was put to bed and remained there. About half past five o'clock yesterday Mr Scott Thornton and Mr. Carpenter were in the room with the sick man. He was perfectly conscious and motioning Mr. Thornton to walk around the bed he said:

"Scott, come around here."

Before Mr. Thornton could walk around the bed the sick man was seized with a spasm and died at once.

Mr. Smith was a tea and coffee merchant at the corner of Peachtree and Line street. He was a native of New York, but came from Florida to Atlanta two years ago, and in January last bought out Hamspeck's tea store. He was a Mason and will be buried with Masonic honors to-morrow. He leaves a wife.

CHARGED WITH LARCENY.

Two Negro Men Who it is Alleged Stole Mr. Venable's Clothing.

About ten daye ago three coats and three vests were stolen from Mr. Sam Venable's room on Peachtree. The theft was reported at police headquarters and a careful discription of the clothing was recorded. Yesterday while doing the circuit Mounted Officers McWilliams and Green came in contact with two negro men who were wearing coats answering the description of Mr. Venable's goods. The officers began questioning the darkies, and the conflicting answers received aroused suspicion and the negroes were arrested. At the city prison they gave their names as Henry Johnson and James Thornton, and were locked up. Their homes were then searched and a large quantity of fine wearing apparel, some silk handkerchiefs and a few pieces of fine jewelry were found. Mr. Venable has identified his clothing.

SERIOUSLY STABBED.

Tom Armstrong and Frank Maddox Have a Little Row Yesterday.

At one time Frank Maddox figured quite prominently among the colored people in Atlanta, but he left the city about a year ago, and no one knew where he was until last week, when he again turned up in Decatur street. Maddox has always had a fondness for cards, and as he was never known to work any, it was generally believed when he left Atlanta that the city had one gambler less. Yesterday Maddox, Tom Armstrong, William Cleary and two or three other negro men congregated in one of the negro dives on the lower end of Decatur street and engaged in a little game of cards. Maddox was the lucky negro of the crowd, and after winning all that Cleary had, broke Armstrong. Armstrong did not take kindly to the loss, and accused Maddox of cheating. Cleary urged Armstrong on, and the quarrel ensued until Armstrong picked up a chair, with which he struck Maddox. He raised the chair to strike the second lick, when Maddox drew his knife and thrust it into Armstrong's side, near the left hip, making a bad wound, which bled freely. Maddox escaped, and Armstrong was carried to his home on Ezzard street. Had the knife penetrated an inch deeper, the wound would have been instantly fatal.

The Gospel Helpers.

The entertainment given by the Gospel Helpers of the First Methodist church Thursday night was one of unusual interest and profit. Mrs. F. A. Kimball manifested great discretion and good taste in the arrangement of her programme. Her zeal and fidelity in this work deserves the admiration and gratitude of all parents and Christians. The children acted their parts well and impressed their audience pleasantly. Their sweet music and weighty missionary words have left a more lasting impression than they have thought, and in turn, we are mistaken if the charming talks of Miss Laura Haygood have not made more [illegible] laries of this entire little band. as well as of all others who heard her. The Gospel Helpers feel more fully that they have stock in China.

The sweet song sung by Miss Ella Powell added much to the pleasure of the evening and is not forgotten by those who enjoyed that delightful hour.

THAT LOST FLAG.

A Letter From Colonel Fisher, of Chicago, to Judge Tompkins.

The following letter from Colonel Francis P. Fisher, of Chicago, renders it about certain that the flag captured by Judge H. B. Tompkins was the last flag of the 55th Illinois, which Bishop Beckwith was asked to help recover. If it is, of course General Clayton will give it up with pleasure. Colonel Fisher's letter is as follows:

CHICAGO, September 25, 1884.—Judge Henry B. Tompkins, Atlanta, Ga.: Dear Sir—Accept my cordial thanks for your favor of the 23d instant, and the kind terms in which it is conveyed. Our regiment (the 55th Illinois volunteers infantry) was stationed on the 23d day of July, 1864, at just about the point named by you, viz., a little to the right of the railroad going out from Atlanta to Augusta. The cut in the railroad had been left unprotected by our forces and your men took advantage of it to flank us, and our regiment, with others, was temporarily forced back into the timber, and our color guard, with the colors, were captured. I think it quite likely that the blue silk flag you refer to was our regimental flag. Should it prove to be so, and should it be now in the possession of General Clayton, our boys will not be slow to acknowledge your generous courtesy in aiding them to "rally around the old flag."

Fraternally yours, FRANCIS P. FISHER.

IN THE COURTS.

Yesterday's Events in and About the Temples of Justice.

Yesterday an interesting suit was started in the United States court. B. G. Lockett, James W. English and John W. Murphy sue W. B. Jopling & Co., a firm composed of W. B. Jopling, W. B. Lowe and A. B. Steele. The suit is an injunction to restrain Jopling & Co., from a brick drying kiln, invented and patented by Lockett & Co. A temporary restraining order was granted and the case will be heard in chambers on Tuesday next before Judge McCay. Lockett & Co. claim that Jopling & Co. are using their valuable patent without authority and contrary to their wishes. Mr. Emory Speer represents the complainants.

AN ATLANTA SHILLING

Is a Cousin of the New Son-in-Law of Old Man Morosini.

Henry Shilling, a bill sticker who is engaged with Dooly, the bill poster, is a cousin of Shelling, the coachman who married Morosini's daughter. Henry is an honest toiler in paste, and has very little to say of his relatives' exploits.

"Your names are not exactly the same," observed a CONSTITUTION man.

"Yaas, he got dot ein hees name. Vell I don't know vere he got it. I ain't got noue."

"What do you think of his caper?"

"I don't know. He always vants to do sometimes vat nuther peoples don't do. He eet odd."

"Well, he's in luck, aint he?"

"Ah! me; I don't know."

"Don't you think it's a good thing to marry a millionaire's daughter?"

"I had not done it, and I am happy as he."

Thus the Atlanta representative of the Shilling name proves himself to be a true philosopher.

OUT ON BOND.

N. Emanuel, the Alabama Street Broker, Securing His Liberty for the Present.

N. Emanuel, the Alabama street broker, who has been in the custody of Supernumarary Ryan for the past three days, was yesterday released upon bond. Emanuel's efforts yesterday to secure a settlement of the differences between himself and the Alliance Bagging company were not successful, and Mr. Ellis, who is representing the company, declined to wait any longer. He then went before Judge Tanner and swore out a warrant against Emanuel. Emanuel waived preliminary trial and his bond was fixed at $1,500. He secured three good boudsmen and was released.

Capitol City Land and Improvement Co

Many inquiries have been made as to the work of the Capitol City Land and Improvement company. We are happy to be able to report gratifying progress.

The real estate committee, Messrs. Jacob Elsas James W. English and Aaron Haas, personally inspect all property offered to the company, and upon the final approval of the entire board of directors the purchases are made. So far over $40,000 worth of choice real estate has been bought and as the company always pays cash, the property has been secured at very reasonable figures. The members of this committee are very good judges of real estate and have made purchases as will prove decidedly profitable to the company.

The company since its organization last April has passed one of the most critical seasons that Atlanta real estate has experienced for years. The officers of the company have labored diligently in the interest of the stockholders, not confining themselves to one locality only, but in the property purchased are fine sites for residences on various streets; also some choice business property, improved and unimproved, that will with the revival of business, which must come soon, become materially enhanced in value and be in great demand.

The building committee, composed of Messrs. John Berkele, John A. Calvin and A. Rosenfeld, will during the coming fall and winter mature plans for extensive improvements, to be begun early next spring.

All monetary transactions are subject to the rigid inspection of the finance committee, composed of Messrs. W. A. Hemphill, John H. Kotner and David Mayer, a trio in which all the stockholders must have the utmost confidence.

A CONSTITUTION man asked Mr. Jacob Haas, the efficient secretary of the company, if the company intended to make improvements on the property it had bought. He said: "We certainly do. We have already several plans on foot for the improvement of several pieces of property we have bought. The contemplated improvements will be submitted to the building committee and approved or amended by them in time for the work to be done next spring. The company is in excellent shape and has been quietly but efficiently putting in some good work. It has secured better bargains than I thought possible. The company after improving the property will sell either for cash or on installments, as purchasers may desire, giving all an opportunity of getting homes at reasonable figures and easy terms."

Baseball Game To-morrow.

The baseball fever has spread among the colored people of Georgia and clubs have been organized in several of the cities, and to-morrow the Atlanta and Savannah clubs will cross bats at Athletic park. The Atlanta club is known as the Champions while the Savannah club call themselves the Nine Brothers. These are the two best colored clubs in the state and it is said that they play as well as many of the most successful white clubs. Admission fee will be twenty-five cents.

Trinity Church.

Trinity church missionary love-feast Monday evening 7:30. Many distinguished miuisters from abroad expected and many officers and members of the Woman's Missionary Society from a distance. Mrs. W. M. Wightman, of Charleston, widow of the bishop will be present, and Mrs. Dr. Boring, president of north Georgia Missionary Society expected and many others. All ministers in the city and all others interested in the missionary cause, cordially invited to this "Good-bye" service.

Missionary Prayer Meeting.

Conducted yesterday morning by Rev. T. R. Kendall. Scripture lessons taken from lxvii. Psalms, lxi. of Isaiah and x. chapter of Acts.

He said that the Psalmist, the Messiah, and the senior Apostle, Peter, demonstrated the true missionary spirit, although Peter must be indoctrinated by the sheet let down from heaven, filled with all manner of incongruous life. Appropriate and impressive remarks were made by Rev. Dr. Hilliard, Rev. F. M. Haygood and Mr. McMaster. Monday morning will probably close the series of meetings as the missionaries leave for China Tuesday.

The Artesian Well.

There was a big accident at the artesian well yesterday. At two o'clock in the morning the drill came off in the well and the tools pounded it some time before the accident became known. At last the tools broke and about thirty feet of iron was loose in the well. It took some time to get the broken pieces out, but that was finally accomplished and the well is clear again. Boring will be resumed to-morrow. The well is 331 feet deep.

The United States Courts.

The United States courts will meet to-morrow. There is a very heavy docket, with an unusual number of civil cases. The usual number of illicit distillers will be on hand to stand trial.

An Appeal for Morris Brown College, Located at Corner of Houston Street and Boulevard.

BY REV. W. J. GAINES.

To the Citizens of Atlanta:

THE CONSTITUTION published an article some weeks ago, stating that the corner stone of the above named college would be laid next Tuesday, October 7th at half past two o'clock. I now take this method of calling your attention to this same matter and at the same time invite you to come out Tuesday next and grace our celebration with your presence.

The first story of the building is completed and paid for and the material for this wing of the college is being laid on the ground as fast as possible. It may be that many who would like to come out to the corner stone laying, will not have time. To all such I would suggest that they might very appropriately represent themselves by a donation, which would reach me at No. 147, Wheat street. God will smile upon and prosper those who contribute to the sacred cause of education.

Let every one come out and help us. Many have promised already and I fully believe that more of the Atlanta people who are so much interested in education will help us. I have commenced this work with a will and determination to succeed, and first I may have encouragement and help from all who are interefted in education. We are struggling to rise as fast as we can though we are poor. It is true this has been a close year in money matters, but curtailment should not begin at the house of God, for the Lord is not a slack paymaster and he has promised to pay back in four fold. All ministers of the city are earnestly invited to be present, and I ask them to pray that God may give us success in this work for we are all one in Christ Jesus: and as the moon gives light to us which she gets from the sun, so we should bless the poor with what we get from God. Therefore I beseech you friends to help us build Morris Brown College and I will continue to pray for heaven to reward you.

Come out and help us next Tuesday and you will be rewarded for your charity by the God of Abraham, for he has promised to bless the cheerful giver.

Rev. Wm. F. Dickson, D. D., of South Carolina; Rev. B. W. Arnett, of Ohio, and many others of our most distinguished ministers will be present. I am, yours, pleading for a struggling people and a worthy object. W. J. GAINES,
Trasurer of Morris Brown College.

A GOLD MINE,

Or Its Equivalent in Value—The Thomas County LeConte Pear.

A CONSTITUTION man recently had a talk with Mr. Rushing, a well known Atlanta business man, concerning the famous LeConte pear. Said Mr. Rushing:

This is a new industry, but we have experimented enough to know that the people of Georgia and the south could not realize from a gold mine (if they had access to one) as much profit and so quick as from this remarkable business.

This pear is to Georgia and adjoining states what oranges are to Florida, only by far more profitable than oranges. To convince you, only visit this county and inquire of every man you see. Each will tell you that it is indeed the big paying business of this section. They will tell you that they cannot raise any other fruit profitably, and if we should have a good year and raise a supply of other fruit, it cannot be shipped to market in good order. Not so with the LeConte pear. We are all convinced that there is no fruit tree in the world that enjoys so many advantages. All other varieties of pear trees, like the peach and apple, blight and soon die, but of the vast quantity of LeConte pear trees now growing here, hundreds of acres, not a sprig of blight has yet been found on a tree. The probability is they will live a hundred years and bear a full crop every year. The oldest tree in existence, now over thirty years old, is as healthy and vigorous as those of five years. The LeConte pear tree never fails to bear annually. The late cool we have some springs only improves the size of the pear, as the trees are usually too full of fruit. We never fail to have an immense crop. The trees commence bearing at four years old when cultivated. We have gathered and shipped from a single tree this season fifteen bushels of pears. Medium trees are furnishing an average of 20 bushels to the tree each year, and increase as they get older.

We have realized every season $3.00 to $4.00 per crate in the northern markets, when peaches were selling at the same time at 50c per bushel. There is no fruit that stands shipping so well. This pear is gathered when fully matured, and it will then be fully two or three weeks before the fruit mellows—giving ample time to ship to any part of the United States. Merchants like to handle it because it mellows gradually, about as fast as they retail it. We never hear any complaint of a crate going to market in bad order.

Now is the time to invest. This industry is in its infancy, except in this and adjoining counties. Millions of money is to be made out of it in the next ten years. Drop a part of your non-paying crop, say cotton, and put out ten acres of LeConte pear trees, and you will soon make a fortune on it. Inquire of our oldest and most reliable citizens as to the profit of this valuable fruit tree, and you will say we have not half represented it. Think of it. A fruit tree that never blights and will live to bear fruit for your grandchildren; a tree that bears fruit every year and from 20 to 40 bushels; a fruit most delicious to eat, besides being the finest for preserving, canning and drying; besides furnishing a large income annually from the cuttings for young trees. This is far ahead of the orange business. Order your trees now and don't put off another year to commence if you want to begin making money at once.

We have one hundred thousand trees, one and two years old. For prices and descriptive circular address RUSHING & CO., Thomasville, Ga., or JNO. G. RUSHING, Atlanta, Ga.

GRAND OPENING.

The Success of Regenstein's Grand Display Last Week.

The recent opening at the elegant store of Mr. J. Regenstein proved one of the most brilliant success ever known in Atlanta. The entire place was thronged with ladies from morning till night. There was such a display of fine millinery goods that would have done credit to one of the swell establishments on Twenty-third or Fourteenth streets in New York. Each lady visiting the opening was presented with an elegant souvenir, a beautiful bunch of rich roses, from the center of which sparkled a pretty little fan. There were several hundred of these given away, which the ladies will long keep as a reminder of that pleasant occasion. A special feature at Regenstein's is the ladies' parlor, a lovely room, fitted up with luxurious carpets, tempting easy chairs and divans, mirrors and everything calculated to charm the eye and give absolute comfort.

During the past week Mr. Regenstein had a special sale of fine ostrich feathers, which will continue this week. These plumes are very rare, and are being offered at astonishingly low prices.

OFF FOR NEW YORK.

An Important Mission that Will Help Atlanta.

Yesterday Mr. James C. Freeman left via the Air-Line route for New York. He goes on an important mission for Atlanta. He was seen before leaving by a CONSTITUTION man.

"What is the object of your visit north?" was asked.

"I am going to make arrangements for direct importations of fine goods from the European markets to Atlanta."

"Do you think it will pay?"

"In our business, yes. You see we avoid the New York middle men, and thus save his profit which we can and will give to our patrons."

"Do you consider this a good market for fine imported goods?"

"Undoubtedly. We have made some of the largest sales ever made in this country outside of the very large cities. For instance, we recently sold in Atlanta a set of solid silver worth $1,200, and know that we have made the largest diamond sale known in Georgia for years. Yes, the people here are being educated to place a proper valuation on fine goods that would astonish you."

"Are many fine watches being sold?"

"Yes, we sell them from $100 to $300 all the time, and not long ago sold to an Atlanta gentleman a Jules Jergensen watch, valued at $1,200."

"When will you return?"

"In two or three weeks and you may expect to see at Freeman & Crankshaw's the handsomest collection of fine imported novelties ever brought to Atlanta."

As Mr. Freeman is no idle talker, what he says may be taken as reliable. And as he is a gentleman of exquisite taste, his selections will be rare and worth the while for waiting to see.

A Good Hotel.

Mr. J. Q. A. Lewis has become the proprietor of the late Duff Green house, now the Lewis house, at Dalton, in fact as well as in name. He has bought the property, and the hotel has been refitted and refurnished throughout, its facilities extended, its capacity somewhat enlarged and its comforts considerably augmented. No hotel man is better known to the travelling public than Mr. J. Q. A. Lewis and to those to whom he is unknown we can heartily commend him. su,tf

Lizzie Evans.

The bewitching little actress, so well named "The Little Electric Battery," will give in this city two performances next Saturday. At the matinee "Maud Muller;" at night the "New Dew Drop." The first play is of the sentimental order, the second of the Lottas type, and both with plenty of comedy. It is interesting to watch the star in those two so different characters, in which, according to press reports, she does really excel. The Memphis Exchange does characterize thus her performances in that city:

"Dew Drop," the prettiest of light comedies, made a decided hit last night at the Grand with Lizzie Evans in the title role. It is by far the prettiest play that has been put on the boards at this theater this season. Dew Drop is a waif from the ocean picked up by a lighthouse tender. The plot is long and interesting, and Miss Evans is a bright, vivacious and captivating little woman, with many of the pretty eccentricities that made Lotta famous. Though she is an actress of the same order, she has none of Palmer's affected pout and mock childishness. Her voice is naturally girlish and pleasant. Dew Drop will be the attraction the rest of the week.

DR. TALMAGE'S

For Every Kind of Sin, Great or Small Conscious Which is the Voice of God, is a Reproof More or Less Emphatic—The Large Crowds Who Hear Dr. Talmage Preach.

BROOKLYN, September 28.—[Special.—I mense crowds continue to throng the Brolyn tabernacle Sunday after Sunday to h Dr. Talmage preach. Among them are m foreigners, especially Englishmen, attrac by his world-wide reputation. Indeed Talmage's sermons are extensively publis in England. The Christian Age, of Lond says of them: "We believe that for origin ity, power and splendor, these sermons bear comparison with the greatest pulpit productions of any age or country. But knowledge of human life and the adapta of divine truth to the whole being, of ma intellectual, emotional, moral, practical— for the power of applying that truth we kn not his equal." The opening hymn at to-d services was:

"Oh, could I speak the matchless worth,
Oh, could I sound the glories forth!"

The subject of the sermon was, "Gover Pilate washing his hands," and the text taken from Matthew xxvii. 24: "He t water and washed his hands before the mu tude, saying, 'I am innocent of the blood this just person.'"

About 8 o'clock in the morning, said Talmage, up the marble stairs of a palace across floor of the richest mosaic, and un a ceiling dyed with all the splendors of col and long snow-banks of white and glitter sculpture passes a pale, poor, sick young t of 33, condemned to death by one court on his way to be condemned by anot Jesus of Nazareth is his name. To meet H on the tesselated pavement comes out an scrupulous, cowardly, time-serving, compr ising man with some few traces of sympat and fair dealing left in his composition, G ernor Pontius Pilate. Did ever two such posites meet? Luxury and pain, selfishn and generosity, sin and holiness, arroga and humility, midnight and mid-noon, Pi and Christ. The bloated-lipped gover takes a cushioned seat and leans back at ease. The prisoner stands, His wrists m acled. In semi-circle around Him are fiery Sanhedrists, their eyes flashing and t fists brandished, prosecuting the case for take of religion; for in all ages religious secutors are the fiercest of all persecutors, when the devil does get possession of men he makes up by intensity for brevity occupation. And if you have never been an ecclesiastical court where they had s one on trial you cannot understand the fo ing infernalism of those old Jewish Sanhedr Governor Pilate begins to cross-question prisoner and finds Him innocent, and w to let Him go. To add to his caution in matter some one comes up and whispers in ear. "What's that?" says the governor, hand behind his ear to catch the words most inaudible. It is a message from Cla Procula, his wife, who has had a dream a the prisoner's innocence and the danger o ecuting Him, and has just awakened from morning dream to send news of it to the ernor at that very moment on the jud bench. And what with the protest of wife and the voice of his own conscience the entire failure of the Sanhedrists to m out a case, he resolves to discharge the prison from custody.

But that announcement let loose on the governor an equinoctial storm of indignation. They would get him recalled by the Emperor Tiberius, at Rome, and he should no more governor of Judea, and how would he then in disgrace and perhaps be hanged for treason. He had already excited the old peror's suspicion, which rested not unt finally did effect his banishment and sui So Governor Pilate, to compromise the ma proposes the whipping of Christ instead His assassination. He was tied to a p near the ground and on His bent and back came the thongs of leather with ch of lead and bone intertwisted to augment force and horror of the stroke, and when was led up from that with flushed cheek torn and quivering and bleeding flesh He sented a spectacle of suffering in which bens, the painter, found the theme fo great masterpiece. But the Sanhedrists still unsatisfied. They wanted not only of his nerves lacerated, they wanted a them lacerated. They did not want a p His blood, they wanted all of it down t last corpuscule. So after all His me hesitation, Pilate surrenders to the dem cal cry of "Crucify him!" But Gov Pilate, seated in the presence of the p sends a slave to fetch him something, constables are impatient to lead out the nal to execution, and the mob in the stre waiting to glare on their victim. But a is necessitated for a few moments. comes a wash basin. The clean, bright is poured into it, and Governor Pontius puts back the sleeves of his robe and t his soft, delicate hands into the wate rubs them together and then lifts them ping for the towel fastened to the slave's and said, practically: "I wash my ha this whole homicidal transaction. I wil none of the responsibility of this pris death. You must assume all of it." friends, that is the meaning of the text it says: "He took water and washe hands before the multitude, saying, 'I i nocent of the blood of this just person, to it!'"

Behold how ceremonies amount to n without correspondencies of heart. It that the hands be washed. DR. TALMAGE'S

SERMON ON GOVERNOR PONTIUS PILATE WASHING HIS HANDS.

For Every Kind of Sin, Great or Small Conscience, Which is the Voice of God, is a Reproof More or Less Emphatic—The Large Crowds Who Hear Dr. Talmage Preach.

BROOKLYN, September 28.—[Special.—Immense crowds continue to throng the Brooklyn tabernacle Sunday after Sunday to hear Dr. Talmage preach. Among them are many foreigners, especially Englishmen, attracted by his world-wide reputation. Indeed Dr. Talmage's sermons are extensively published in England. The Christian Age, of London, says of them: "We believe that for originality, power and splendor, these sermons will bear comparison with the greatest pulpit productions of any age or country. But for knowledge of human life and the adaptation of divine truth to the whole being of man—intellectual, emotional, moral, practical—and for the power of applying that truth we know not his equal." The opening hymn at to-day's services was:

"Oh, could I speak the matchless worth,
Oh, could I sound the glories forth!"

The subject of the sermon was, "Governor Pilate washing his hands," and the text was taken from Matthew xxvii. 24: "He took water and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, 'I am innocent of the blood of this just person.'"

About 8 o'clock in the morning, said Dr. Talmage, up the marble stairs of a palace and across floor of the richest mosaic, and under a ceiling dyed with all the splendors of color, and long snow-banks of white and glittering sculpture passes a pale, poor, sick young man of 33, condemned to death by one court and on his way to be condemned by another Jesus of Nazareth is his name. To meet Him on the tesselated pavement comes out an unscrupulous, cowardly, time-serving, compromising man with some few traces of sympathy and fair dealing left in his composition, Governor Pontius Pilate. Did ever two such opposites meet? Luxury and pain, selfishness and generosity, sin and holiness, arrogance and humility, midnight and mid-noon, Pilate and Christ. The bloated-lipped governor takes a cushioned seat and leans back at his ease. The prisoner stands, His wrists manacled. In semi-circle around Him are the fiery Sanhedrists, their eyes flashing and their fists brandished, prosecuting the case for the sake of religion; for in all ages religious persecutors are the fiercest of all persecutors, and when the devil does get possession of good men he makes up by intensity for brevity of occupation. And if you have never been in an ecclesiastical court where they had some one on trial you cannot understand the foaming infernalism of those old Jewish Sandedrists. Governor Pilate begins to cross-question the prisoner and finds Him innocent, and wants to let Him go. To add to his caution in the matter some one comes up and whispers in his ear. "What's that?" says the governor, his hand behind his ear to catch the words almost inaudible. It is a message from Claudia Procula, his wife, who has had a dream about the prisoner's innocence and the danger of executing Him, and has just awakened from this morning dream to send news of it to the governor at that very moment on the judicial bench. And what with the protest of his wife and the voice of his own conscience and the entire failure of the Sandedrists to make out a case, he resolves to discharge the prisoner from custody.

But that announcement let loose on the governor an equinoctial storm of indignation. They would get him recalled by the Emperor Tiberius, at Rome, and he should no more be governor of Judea, and how would he feel then in disgrace and perhaps be hanged for treason. He had already excited the old emperor's suspicion, which rested not until it finally did effect his banishment and suicide. So Governor Pilate, to compromise the matter, proposes the whipping of Christ instead of His assassination. He was tied to a pillar near the ground and on His bent and bare back came the thongs of leather with chunks of lead and bone intertwisted to augment the force and horror of the stroke, and when He was led up from that with flushed cheek and torn and quivering and bleeding flesh He presented a spectacle of suffering in which Rubens, the painter, found the theme for his great masterpiece. But the Sanhedrists were still unsatisfied. They wanted not only part of his nerves lacerated, they wanted all of them lacerated. They did not want a part of His blood, they wanted all of it down to the last corpuscule. So after all His merciful hesitation, Pilate surrenders to the demoniacal cry of "Crucify him!" But Governor Pilate, seated in the presence of the people, sends a slave to fetch him something. The constables are impatient to lead out the criminal to execution, and the mob in the street are waiting to glare on their victim. But a pause is necessitated for a few moments. Yonder comes a wash basin. The clean, bright water is poured into it, and Governor Pontius Pilate puts back the sleeves of his robe and thrusts his soft, delicate hands into the water and rubs them together and then lifts them dripping for the towel fastened to the slave's girdle, and said, practically: "I wash my hands of this whole homicidal transaction. I will take none of the responsibility of this prisoner's death. You must assume all of it." My friends, that is the meaning of the text when it says: "He took water and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, 'I am innocent of the blood of this just person, see ye to it!'"

Behold how ceremonies amount to nothing without correspondencies of heart. It is well that the hands be washed. When God made three-fourths of the world water, He commanded cleanliness, and as the ancients did not take the hint He put a whole world under water. The Jewish religion made handwashing a law. By minute direction the hands must be plunged three times up to the wrist and the palm of one hand rubbed by the closed fist of the other. The Jewish Mishna gives elaborate rule on this subject. All well as a symbol. But here in my text Governor Pilate proposes to wash off a guilt which he does not quit, and of which he makes repentance. Pilate's wash-basin is a failure. Ceremonies grand and good in themselves may mean no more than this hypocritical ablution. We may be sprinkled in childhood at baptismal fountains, and in manood may wade into solemn immersions and never reach moral purification. We may kneel without prayer and bow the head without reverence and sing without acceptance. All the creeds and all the liturgies and all the sacraments and all the genuflections and all the religious convocations amount to nothing unless the heart and the life go into them. When the bronze slave of the palace carried out Pilate's wash-basin he carried out none of Pilate's cruelty or cowardice or wickedness. Nothing against creeds, we all have them either written or implied. Nothing against ceremonies, they are infinitely important. Nothing against sacraments, they are divinely commanded. No objection to the rosary if there are as many heartfelt prayers as beads counted. No objections to incense floating from censers among gothic arches if the devotion it typifies is as the aroma ascending. No objections to Epiphany and Lent and Ash Wednesday and Easter and Whitsuntide and Palm Sunday if the forms are only symbols of real penitence, and of holy reminiscence and consecration. Ceremonies are only the sheath of the sword, only the shell of the kernel, only the lamp of the flame, only the body of the spirit. But the outward must be only typical of the inward. Most surely wash your hands, but more surely wash your heart.

Behold, also, as you see Governor Pilate thrust his hands into this wash-basin, the power of conscience. He felt that already there was blood on his hand and it needed to be removed, the blood of an innocent prisoner, the blood of One whom he might have set at liberty had he only possessed the courage to do so. Poor Pilate! His conscience was after him, and he never could wash off that stain either from his right hand or his left hand, and to the day of his death, though dipped in all the lavers of the Roman empire, there would be eight fingers and two thumbs red at the tips. Oh, the power of conscience when fully aroused! With what whip of scorpions, over what bed of spikes, into what pitchy midnight it chases the guilty! Are there ghosts? Yes; but not of the graveyard; ghosts of the mind not at rest with itself.

"Thus Brutus, amid his slumbering host
Startled by Cæsar's stalwart ghost."

Macbeth looks at his hands after he has committed midnight assassination, and says:

"Will all your Neptune's ocean wash this blood
Clean from my hand? No, this my hand will rather
The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
Making the green—one red."

For every kind of sin, great or small conscience, which is the voice of God, is a reproof more or less emphatic. Charles IX, who ordered the St. Bartholomew massacre, was pursued by bitter memories until the last, and in his dying moments said to his doctor, Ambrose Perry: "I know not how it is, but the last few days I feel as in a fever. My body and mind are both disturbed. Oh, I wish I had spared the innocent and the imbecile." Rousseau confessed in old age that a deed committed by him when he was young had given him many sleepless nights. Charles II, of Spain, did not dare sleep unless he had in his room a confessor and two friars. Catiline was haunted at his evil deeds and was startled at the least sound. Richard III, after slaying his two nephews, would, in the night, leap out of bed and clutch his sword and strike at apparitions. Cardinal Beaufort, who had taken the life of the Duke of Gloucester, sometimes would cry out: "Away, away! Why do you look at me?" Professor Webster, of Boston, while in prison waiting for his doom on the scaffold, complained to the sheriff that other prisoners kept charging him with crime through the walls of the prison, although it was only the voice of his own conscience. From whom did Adam and Eve try to hide when they had all the world to themselves? From conscience. What made Cain's punishment greater than he could bear? His conscience. What made Ahab cry out to the prophet, "Hast thou found me, O mine enemy?" Conscience. What made Felix quake before his chained prisoner, Paul, the little missionary? Conscience. What made Belshazzar's teeth chatter with the chill when a finger came out of the black sleeve of the midnight and wrote on the plaster? Conscience.

What makes that man yonder in this audience who has all the marks of prosperity upon him seem so agitated while I preach—now flushed, now pale, his breath uneven and the beads of perspiration coming on his brow, and all the features of his conscience written over with a strange unrest, rising into horror? I don't know, but he knows and God knows. Perhaps he despoiled some fair life with a deed that turned innocence into a waif and the smile of hope into the brazen laughter of despair. Or perhaps he has in his possession that which belongs to others, and by acutest stratagem he holds it according to law but knows that it is not his own, and realizes that if his heart should this moment stop its beating he would be in hell forever. Or perhaps he is responsible for a great mystery, the disappearance of some one never heard of again. The detectives were baffled and all the tracks were covered up. The swift horse of the rail train got him away, and there are only two beings who know his guilt, God and himself. God was present at the time of the tragedy and is present now at the retrospection and conscience, conscience with sting, conscience with pincers, conscience with fail, conscience with furnaces, is upon him.

What made a farmer after his conversion to Christ go to his infidel neighbor and say: "I have four sheep that belong to you; they came into my field six years ago and your mark was on them but I changed it to mine; I want you to have those sheep and the increase of the flock and the interest of the money they were worth, and anything you ask, and if you send me to prison I will not complain." "Well," said the infidel, "if you heve got them sheep you can have them; I don't want nothing of you if you will only go away. Something must have got hold of you I don't understand. "But the newly-made Christian declining to let matters stand that way, the infidel said: "Well," if you must, you can pay me for what the sheep were worth when they got into your fold and six per cent interest on the amount and go off and let me alone. What was the matter with the two farmers? A convicted conscience, calling the one to be honest and calling the other to quit his infidelity.

Thomas Olivers was one of John Wesley's preachers. The former part of Oliver's life had been spent recklessly, and in making debts wherever he could borrow or buy without payment, till he owed money in all directions. When converted he started out to preach and pay his debts with some money he had inherited. He rode a great distance to pay a sixpence, and before he got there he attested his conversions, not only by his sermons but by paying all the money he owed, principal and interest, although to square his accounts with God and his fellow man he had to sell his horse and saddle and bridle. Work of a converted conscience!

When Frank Thibaut, the rum seller, was converted he had a large amount of the best liquor on hand. He put all the barrels and jugs and kegs and decanters on wagons and drove them down and emptied them in front of the old meeting-house where he had been converted. Now that is what I call genuine religion.

What is the meaning of the large sums of money going every year to Washington, United States treasury, called conscience money. It seems that a great many collectors and post-masters and attorneys and governmental officials have retained money that did not belong to them, and they are converted or their conscience gives them some terrible fright and they make restitution. The fact is that if all the moneys stolen from state and national treasury under some great revival of conscience were returned to the rightful exchequers all the state debts and the United States debts would be paid by day after to-morrow. A man's conversion is not worth much unless not only his heart is converted; but his pocket-book converted and the ledger converted and the fire-proof safe converted and all his pigeon holes of bills and correspondences converted, and the fact of his improvement is discovered by the canary bird that sings in his parlor and the cat that licks the platter after meals and the dog that comes out to greet him from the kennel in the back yard. A man half converted or a quarter converted or a thousandth part converted is not converted at all.

What will be the book of judgment in the last great day? Conscience. Conscience bringing up misimproved opportunities, conscience marshaling unforgiven transgressions, conscience recalling all the past. There will be no need of a great and ponderous book with lids so heavy that two mighty angels with great strain of strength must open it. We shall take the leaves of the book out of our own memory, and conscience will be there potent and tremendous to echo the welcome or doom. There have been great days of soldiery review in France and England and America, but the greatest day of review will be when at the roll of archangel's trumpet, all the unforgiven sins of a man's life come up and take their places in companies and regiments and brigades and all facing the one way, and with shouldered arms that shall wait the command, and Conscience mounted on the white horse of judgment shall ride along with sharp spur and uplifted sword and bid them "March!" and bid them "Take aim!" and bid them "Fire!" What can stand before that charge of all the batalions of a sinful and unimproved past? Not one of us unless we have had something better than Pilate's wash basin to cleanse our hands and cleanse our souls.

Alas, for the agitated Judean governor that night after the court had adjourned and the Sanhedrists were gone and only the tread of the sentinel at his door was heard. I think he rose from his tapestried and sleepless couch and went again to the laver and thrust his hands up to the wrist in the water and cried: "Out! Out! Thou crimson spot! How thou seemest fast telling the story to me and the night and God! Is there no alkali that can remove this dreadful stain? Is there no chemistry to dissolve this carnage? Must I live and die with the blood of a martyr on my hands and the blood of heavenly innocence upon my immortal soul? One of the worst woes is that of an evil conscience and one of the greatest blessings what Paul calls a good conscience. But are all our attemps at moral purification like that of Governor Pontius Pilate to be a dead failure? If a man is a sinner once must he always be an unforgiven sinner? Is there no laver in which we can successfully wash? We have all had conscience after us, but do you tell me that all the thoughts of your heart and all the words of your mouth and all the actions of your life have been exactly perfect? Then you don't know yourself, and I will take the mild responsibility of saying you are a Pharisee, you are a hypocrite, you are a Pontius Pilate and don't know it. You have done by your heartlessness what a Roman governor did at the start. You have re-crucified the Son of God.

But I think that if nine-tenths of this audience are made up of earnest and thoughtful people, then nine-tenths are beginning to awake under the power of aroused conscience if there is not something for the cleansing of the soul better than Governor Pilate's wash basin. Yes! yes! yes! Tell it one to another. Tell it in song. Tell it in sermon. Tell it to the hemispheres. David, the Psalmist cried out for it when he said: "Wash me thoroughly from my own iniquity and cleanse me from my sin" and again "wash me and I shall be whiter than snow." Job deplored his failure when he said: "If I wash myself with snow water and make my hands never so clean, yet shalt thou plunge me in the ditch and mine own clothes shall abhor me." What, then? Where, then? How, then! Behold the laver of the gospel filled with living fountains. Did you ever see a picture of the lavers in the ancient tabernacle and the ancient temple? The one in the tabernacle was made out of the women's metallic looking glasses contributed by them, a round basin on a pedestal and it was filled with water. But when the temple was built the laver was an immense affair and was called the brazen sea. Deep were the floods there gathered. Besides this there were ten other lavers, five to the right of it and five to the left of it, each holding 300 gallons of pure water, and the outside of these lavers was carved and chased with palm trees so delicately cut the leaves seemed to quiver, and with lions so true to life that you could almost see the throb of their nostrils, and cherubim with wings ready for flight. Magnificent laver of the old dispensation, feeble type of the greater laver of our sunlit dispensation, a laver filled from rivers of salvation, its pedestal the Rock of Ages, carved with figure of the lion of Judah's tribe and palm trees of victory, and wings suggestive of the soul's flight heavenward when we worship and the saints' flight heavenward when we die. Come all ye auditors and wash off all your sins however aggravated, and all your sorrows however agonizing. Come in the furtherest, the deepest, the worst!

What an opportunity! That is a joy enough to swallow all nations. It will stand on the Alps and beckon Italy on the Pyrenees and call Spain on the Ural and enchant Russia at the door of heaven and gather in the nations. Pardon for all and comfort for all who will accept them through Christ Jesus. "Why did you not tell me how beautiful the earth and sky are," said a little child, whose eyes by skilful surgery had been opened. "I did tell you over and over again," said the mother, "but you could not understand it." Would to God that all of us might have our eyes opened and see for ourselves the one altogether lovely. The half has not been told us. The army of Godfrey marching towards the capture of the city of Jerusalem gave a great shout at the first sight of the towers so that the very earth quaked under the sound, and eagles flying in the air dropped under the atmospheric percussion. And if we could this day catch a full view of the towers and domes of this gospel temple into which you are all invited to come and wash and be clean, the hosannas would be jubilant and resounding at the New Jerusalem scene, and the New Jerusalem taken and the anthems of higher worlds, flying midair, would fold their wings and drop into our closing doxology. Against the ineffectual and disappointing laver of Pilate's cowardice and sin I place the "molton sea" of a Savior's pardoning mercy.

A STATEMENT

Of Facts For The People To Consider.

ATLANTA, June 12, 1884.

Emerging from a severe and long spell of typhoid fever, I discovered that the fever had settled in my right leg, which caused it to swell to an enormous size, remaining so quite three years, resisting all treatment. A small ulcer finally made its appearance a little above the ankle, which refused to heal to any and all external applications and the use of the most noted, so-called, blood-poison remedies.

During this treatment the swelling remained the same, and the ulcer continued to enlarge, frequently discharging perhaps as much as a cupful of pus or matter per day. The size of the ulcer was about two inches in diameter, extending to a depth near the bone. At one time it appeared that the flesh in all contiguous parts would surely become a running sore, as its peculiarly flabby, spotted and unhealthy condition clearly indicated, and it was intimated that I might lose my leg. My condition becoming so critical, and the ulcer enlarging so rapidly, that through the advice of my brother, R. M. Cheshire, we sent for Dr. J. P. Dromgoole, who made a thorough examination, and said that the flesh on my leg for six inches around the sore would soon slough off if not remedied; that I must positively remain quiet, have my leg bandaged daily and commence at once the use of B. B. B.

I acted according to instructions, and after using the second bottle became convinced that the medicine was having the desired effect, as the ulcer looked fresh and healthy, and commenced healing. I continued the use of B. B. B., and to the great astonishment and satisfaction of myself and friends, the ulcer continued to heal rapidly until now it is entirely well, and I am attending to my business at W. H. Brotherton's store. I do not hesitate to recommend B. B. B. as a wonderful, speedy and effectual Blood Purifier, far superior to anything else I ever used.

I refer to W. H. Brotherton, W. B. Cone, Major D. A. Cook, Dr. Park, Dr. J. L. Pinson and others of Atlanta. W. M. CHESHIRE.

I am well acquainted with the above case of my brother, and know the statements therein contained to be true, and take much pleasure in testifying to the almost magical effects of the B. B. B. as a speedy Blood Purifier.

A TALK WITH A BIRMINGHAM DRUGGIST.

(Clipped from the Birmingham Chronicle.)

"How is the drug business?" asked the Chronicle of Mr. A. L. Stollenweick, one of the leading Birmingham druggists.

"In some departments dull, like everything else, but people must have medicine, and it is as staple as bread."

"What on earth are all those attractive bottles in that row?" we asked, as we turned our eyes to the right.

"That, sir, is the most rapidly selling patent medicine ever introduced in this country, I never saw anything like it. It is, comparatively speaking, a new medicine, having been introduced to my customers nine months ago."

"How do you account for this popularity of the medicine in so short a time?"

"Because it is all that is claimed for it—the greatest blood medicine of the age. I know of many cases where it has cured blood poison, skin diseases, kidney troubles, old ulcers, rheumatism, etc. A few days ago a gentleman who lives in Cahaba valley came to me and purchased one dozen bottles of this medicine. Said he had seen it advertised and tried one bottle on his little child, who had a terrible sore of some kind on its neck. The little one was so much improved by it that he had determined to buy a large quantity of it and continue its use until his child was entirely restored, and also use it as a general family medicine. This is only one instance out of many."

"Is it perfectly harmless in its effects?"

"The tenderest babe can use it without any unpleasant effects. My customers say it gives a keen appetite and imparts strength and vigor at once."

"Pretty costly medicine, then, I suppose, as it is so valuable."

"No, sir; it is the CHEAPEST blood remedy to be found. Large bottles only $1, and one bottle seems to convince every one that it is by far the quickest remedy known."

"Are the sales large?"

"It outsells anything in my house. I have bought two gross within ninety days, as it is rapidly running every other blood remedy out of the market."

"What do you call the medicine?"

"B. B. B., Botanic Blood Balm, just as you see it labeled. It is made at Atlanta, Ga., by the Blood Balm company, and it will very soon make that the richest medicine company in this country, for they have certainly struck the key-note of success."

Inflammatory Rheumatism

I was attacked last winter with inflammatory rheumatism of severe type—my first serious illness since 1876. I had various kinds of treatment with only temporary partial relief. After seven weeks I was reduced in weight 48 pounds, had no strength nor appetite, and was growing weaker every day. In this condition I began Swift's Specific and in three days began to improve, and in three weeks I was free from disease and up attending to my regular business. My appetite returned and I rapidly gained my flesh. I have waited this long to be certain that my cure was permanent.

A GOD SEND.

I have had rheumatism for forty years, and have been relieved with a few bottles of S. S. S. I consider it a God-send to the afflicted.

J. B. WALLER, Thomson, Ga., Aug. 16, 1884.

MINERAL POISON!

I have suffered untold misery for many years from poisonous effects of mercury, which at last developed into an ulcer on my leg, which refused to heal. Finally I used Swift's Specific, and it has entirely disappeared, and I am in better health than for years. It is the best blood remedy in the world.

Rheumatism 20 Years!

I have been a sufferer from rheumatism for 20 years, at times with almost intolerable pain. I had the best medical treatment, and took all sorts of remedies, but without relief. Being reduced almost to a skeleton, and not being able to walk even with crutches, I was induced to try Swift's Specific, and it acted like a charm, and I am today entirely relieved. Have thrown away my crutches, and am in excellent health. I believe Swift's Specific will cure the worst cases of rheumatism.

A REMARKABLE CURE!

—IN WHICH—

PHYSICIANS AND SURGONS

—DECIDED—

TO USE THE KNIFE.

My wife and daughter suffered for years with an affection of the throat, which was gradually but surely undermining their health, and was a source of anxiety to all of us. Two of the best physicians of the city and also a surgeon were called in, and after a careful examination they decided that there was no chance for a cure unless they would consent to undergo a surgical operation. We were much opposed to the knife being used, until all other means had been exhausted. So, we began to use different throat remedies sold at drug stores. We finally got to Brewer's Lung Restorer, and the effects were truly wonderful; and after a few bottles had been taken they were entirely relieved of the trouble and their health fully restored. If any of my family should ever be similarly affected, I would, if necessary, travel around the world in order to get this remedy.

Very respectfully, W. H. MANSFIELD,
Macon, Ga.

MACON, GA., August 15th, 1880.

With great pleasure I certify to the efficacy of that truly excellent preparation—Brewer's Lung Restorer. It has indeed proven to be a sovereign remedy in my family. For many months my wife has suffered from weak lungs, and has experienced great difficulty in breathing, so much so that she could not sleep at all at night; she also lost her appetite, and, in fact, her condition was truly alarming. The Lung Restorer having been recommended by several friends, I resolved to get it and test its virtues, which I did, and with the most happy effect. She has taken but two bottles, and the result is wonderful. She now experiences no difficulty in breathing, her appetite is good, and she is rapidly regaining her strength and I am convinced its continued use will effect a permanent cure. I would, therefore, cheerfully recommend it to all who have weak lungs, as it cannot fail to be of great benefit to all who may give it a trial. Yours truly, GEORGE W. SIMS.

The above testimonial was given in 1880. Hear what the same gentleman says after an interval of four years:

"I have had no cause to change my opinion relative to the efficacy of Brewer's Lung Restorer in cases of diseased lungs. The benefit derived by my wife from its use has been permanent. My faith in its virtues is such that I cheerfully recommend it to all who are afflicted with pulmonary disease. Very respectfully, GEORGE W. SIMS

SOCIAL GOSSIP.

THE FEATURES OF THE WEEK CHRONICLED.

Entertaining Our Company—The Movement of Our People Abroad Marrying and Given in Marriage—Topics of Interest to Our Lady Readers—Theatrical Matters, Etc.

While it has been quite warm and dusty during the past week, it cannot be said that society people found it unbearably dull. There were four or five weddings, a like number of receptions and a few dinings. There were three productions of "Dad's Girl," by Miss Uima at the opera house, and three presentations of opera by Grau's company. In the early part of the week there was a spirited and exciting game of baseball, and the amusements of the week closed with two largely attended performances of Doris's circus and menagerie.

Grand Hop.

A grand hop will be given at the National hotel, Dalton, on the night of the 18th, complimentary to a number of Atlantese who will visit Dalton on that date.

Prospective Nuptial Knot.

Invitations are out to the marriage of Miss Katie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gross, to Mr. William Rasmers, Tuesday evening, October 14, at 8 o'clock, First English Lutheran church, Lamale and Fremont street, Baltimore.

Pleasant Dance.

A delightful dance came off at the residence of Captain Norman, at Oak Hill, Wednesday night. Conversation, sweet music, joyous dancing, sparkling wit, filled up several hours pleasantly to all present. Refreshments were served at 10 o'clock, after which the pleasures of the evening were indulged in.

Hop at Smyrna.

The young men of Smyrna and vicinity gave a very delightful hop at the hall a few evenings since. The occasion was one of much enjoyment and will be most pleasantly remembered. Among other places admirably represented, was Atlanta. Mr. M. V. Ruff, as floor manager, made many friends by his courtesy and kind consideration in his efforts to add to the comfort and pleasure of all present.

Anniversary Dinner.

The 2d of October an exceedingly pleasant anniversary was given at the residence of Mr. S. F. Kincannon, in this city. It was given by the sisters and children of the late Mr. William Duke, of Kentucky. The family consisted of Mrs M. E. Kincannon, Mrs. R. Merrifield, of Brunswick, Miss Sallie Duke and Mr. G. A. Duke. These were the survivors of a family of eleven children.

Pretty Girls.

Atlanta is always boasting of its beautiful girls, but from the continued and constant visits of her young men to our city it seems as if they can't see it. The fact is not only to them, but in the eyes of the world our "girls are monuments of beauty."—Marietta Journal.

No one will dispute with the Journal as to the beauty of the young ladies of Marietta. The trouble with the young men of Atlanta is that there are such numbers of them here, each young lady having about half a dozen beaux, consequently the young men have no show. The only hope is that quite a number of Marietta's beauties may be captured and added to Atlanta society.

A Grand Reception.

One of the largest and most enjoyable events of the season was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Crawford, at No. 16 Smith street on last Thursday evening. It was a reception given to Mr. M. W. Almand and his charming bride, nee Miss Zurie Crew. The parlors were crowded with some of the most fashionable and popular young ladies and gentlemen of this city. The supper was a most excellent one and was immensely enjoyed by all who were present. After supper the crowd gathered in the parlors again, where the balance of the evening was spent in music, singing, etc. The happy couple left last Friday for Conyers, the former home of the groom, where they will spend a few days with relatives and friends.

Dry and Dusty.

To have had a real good rain any day during the past three or four weeks, almost any citizen of Atlanta would have been willing to stood in it, and muttered the words of King Lear: "Pour on, pour on; I can endure such a storm as this." But no rain has fallen, and instead of the words of Lear, complaints have fallen compared to which the lamentations of Jeremiah were zephyrs. During the week there were various indications of rain. Often clouds gathered, and there were fair prospects of a grand pyrotechnic display, a dashing rain and well drenched streets. One morning there was a heavy dew, two or three times the "ring" could be seen around the moon, the spielers showed their sign, yet all went to prove, as a Latin scholar of Prof. Slaton's high school would say, perhaps, Fronti nulla fides.

Fox Hunt.

One of the most glorious and soul-stirring events of the season took place in the charming retreat and classic groves of Hephzibah, Ga., on last Friday morning. The event was a fox hunt, in which gallant beaux of Atlanta and Augusta participated, with the enthusiasm of "Max," and beautiful maidens of Hephzibah and Augusta engaged in the chase with the veritable ardor and grace of Lady Gay Spanker. Just as Aurora kissed the earth and brightened it with her roseate hue, twenty couples emerged from the residence of Captain T. G. Story, beautifully equipped for the saddle and ready for the chase. The start was a picture. Away we flew, with forty dogs to scare the little gray animal from his retreat. Many miles of Hephzibah's green checkwas traversed before the gray fox appeared. But at last success crowned the efforts of the party, and cries of triumph soon told the village of success on returning to a dainty hunting breakfast at 10 o'clock a. m. Notable among those who displayed exquisite grace and handsome bearing in the saddle were Mr. W. T. Spalding, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Lulu Lee Byne, Hephzibah, Ga.; Mr. C. B. Garrett, Augusta, Ga.; Miss Mamie Byne, Hephzibah, Ga.; Mr. W. H. Davis, Hephzibah, Ga.; Miss Susie Story, Hephzibah, G.; Mr. G. P. Kilpatrick, Hephzibah, Ga.; Miss Ramsey, Augusta, Ga., and Mr. C. E. Schaffner, Hephzibah, Ga.

DeGive's Opera House.

Waiting the dust, heat and scarity of money into the operation, the business at the opera house has been very good.

The Garland opera house at Waco, Texas, has some rules and regulations for the season. These rules, in connection with some advice of the Daily News, of Philadelphia, are worthy the consideration of theater habitues in our city.

No smoking or wearing of hats is allowed in any part of the house in Waco. No gentleman is allowed to sit with his coat off any where in the Waco theater, and if he uses tobacco an usher will furnish him a cuspidor. Ladies and gentlemen are not expected to leave the hall at the close of the last act until the curtain goes down.

As to the advice: Don't—loiter in the doorway or aisle in leaving.

Don't—and this is for the ladies—wear a flaring hat with profuse trimmings, even though showy and becoming.

Don't—put your feet upon the seat in front of you, or in any way move or jostle any seat but the one you have paid for.

Don't—keep a line of buyers waiting while you hunt from pocket to pocket for the requisite money, or linger unnecessarily at the window.

Don't—make audible criticisms upon the play, as you may thus rudely disturb some delightful illusions in which your neighbor is indulging.

Don't—leave your seat for the next person to either stumble over or to turn upward for you. Just a simple movement and it is put in place and the aisle clear.

Don't—crowd the person sitting next you by taking any sidewise position extra elbow-room, or in any other way encroaching upon the space allotted to him.

The only amusement this week will be Denier's Humpty Dumpty, which will be here Thursday and Friday, with matinee.

The Charleston Courier says: "The chief attractions last night were the fine specialties that have been added to the entertainment this season, and which are both excellent and new. There are, first the musical team, consisting of Messrs. De Witt and Kirnen, whose artistic solos and duets would attract attention in any city and elicit applause from any audience. Second, Professor A. L. Gleason's educated dogs, which are trained perhaps as far as the limit to which dog-training can be carried. The next step in their education would have been teaching them to talk. As it is, they certainly understand the English language to a remarkable extent for dogs.

Miss Sophie Ravel, who was "Columbina" in "Humpty Dumpty on the Wall," has the good fortune to be very pretty and very graceful, and in addition to this her dancing is superb. It was evident that she had captured the audience, from the gallery down, in five minutes after her first appearance. Miss Amy Boshell has a very pleasant voice and used it well when she sang "By Baby By." Ravel, the clown, attracted most attention, and such laughter as he was greeted with is seldom heard, even at the Academy of Music. The acts of Frank F. Torbey and the Leonhardt Brothers on the horizontal bar are equal to anything on the road at present.

The closing act, entitled "Humpty Dumpty in the Wild West among the Indians," was the most realistic of all. The make-up of the Indians was "like the original," and their attack on the camp very thrilling.

The Table.

The latest dinner table accompaniment is a bunch of garland or china flowers.

Plain white china will be the most fashionable at all the "high class" private dinner parties.

Costume motives such like fish and crabs and containing caps and aprons when opened will continue to decorate tables at large suppers.

For a nice, quiet chat, a game of rubber, or a parlor dance, the early supper will be the favorite, where it is the purpose of the host to have a small and select party.

The clerk of Queen Victoria's kitchen is paid $3,500 a year, and "found." He has seven clerks under him. Her chief cooks receives $3,500 a year, and he has four assistant cooks $1,750 each. There are six other assistant cooks and twelve helpers. The head of the confectionery department of the kitchen receives $1,500 yearly, and he has six assistants at $1,250 each. Then there is the pastry cook and baker, with four assistants, and three women who have charge of the coffee room.

New Ornaments for Men.

A novelty in walking sticks is a hickory one with a silver egg for its handle.

Big four in hand scarfs of silk and satin will be worn, flat scarfs are going out of style.

The straight choker collar will not be as much worn as the English collar turned over in front.

Personal and Otherwise.

To be successful in the gay society world, one should be enthusiastic.

Life is a pleasant thing to have when its chariot wheels revolve in smooth places.

There is a society lady in Atlanta who practices "that charity which thinketh no evil."

A good many people are fond of scandal. Like Dryden, they "carve it as a dish fit for the gods."

Miss Penelope Hebert, an intelligent and pleasant young lady of Marietta, is attending school in Atlanta.

Mrs. Hattie Mims, of this city, is quite ill at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Jordan, in Murfreesboro, Tennessee.

"Why is it that the festive mosquito prefers to caress the fleshy of the ear of a pretty girl rather than her lips?"

As a general thing, society people in Atlanta do not sleep late, do not find the arms of Morpheus tenacious.

There is a young lady residing in Atlanta, who is the owner of a pair of eyes that can look away a young man's heart.

The Mother Hubbard dress is more stylish and gracefully, and equally as cool as the "toga," worn by the ancient Romans.

Mrs. Grundy says of a delightful young widow of this city, that she begins to hum the song—

"The sunshine sweeps across my life again."

Miss Sophia Ranel, the very pretty and graceful "Columbine" of the Humpty Dumpty company, will twinkle her feet at DeGive's opera house this week.

Marshall J. Clarke, who has been confined to his house by severe illness for several weeks, is slowly convalescing and will probably return to business during the week.

The dry weather has pretty much burned up the grass in the city hall park. If Nebuchadnezzar had been doomed to pasture on such grounds he must have died of hunger.

Pedestrians up and down Ellis street for several weeks past have not been covered with brush like Malcom's army under the woods of Birnam, but O! the dust, the dust.

Since the city officials took the grade of Ellis street, and relaid the crossings of Ellis and Ivy and Ellis and Collins, residents and pedestrians in those localities feel indeed like the Lady of Shalott, "that the curse had come upon them."

It may be autumn, yet the request cannot be given to—

"Shut up the lattice make it fast:
The wind has turned austere and cold,
And, borne upon the funeral blast,
The first dead leaf's poor corpse behold."

Three new roses are now the fashion this season. They are known as the Sunset, Southern Belle and Countess Pembroke. The first named is a large and fine tea rose, the second a delicate light pink tea rose, and the third resembles the LaFrance rose, save that its petals are pink on their inner and outer sides.

Some of our citizens still ask that the classics be given up in our schools.

"Forbid, City Fathers, we loud implore,
A dispensation harsh as that!
What! wipe away the sweets of yore—
The dear 'Ane, anes, anart!'"

"Alabamian" the correspondent of the Birmingham Iron Age, writing from Tate springs, says: "Miss Cliff Kiser, of Atlanta, and Miss Lula Linermore, of Memphis, have also captured many hearts; the former a tall, queenly girl, lovely brown hair and large brown eyes, the latter a bewitching blonde, blue eyes and exquisite form." Miss Kiser has returned to her home in Atlanta.

"'Tis the last rose of summer

Well, this hardly holds good of roses and other flowers in Atlanta this season. Though September was a very warm and exceedingly dry month, flowers bud and bloomed wonderfully and bloomed very prettily, and are doing so now.

There is a young Dutchman in Atlanta, who for over two years has been engaged to a young German girl, who lived in New York. On Thursday, he received a letter telling of her marriage to a young Dutchman. He takes it so easily, and speaks of it in such a manner that the natural conclusion is, that he consoles himself with the idea that—Dhere vas youst so good fish in der vasser as dond got pulled out.

Going—Gone.

Miss Laura Kimball is visiting in Gainesville.

Mrs. Longley, of this city, is visiting her son in LaGrange.

Colonel Markham and wife, of Atlanta, were in Dalton during the week.

Mr. Dick Gray and wife, of Atlanta, are visiting relatives in Adairsville.

Miss Emmie Richards, of Atlanta, is visiting Mrs. A. R. Phillips, in LaGrange.

Mr. Woods White and his mother, Mrs. Dr. White, of this city, were in Marietta during the week.

Mr. J. L. Winter, of this city, accompanied by his family, have gone to New Orleans, where they will spend the winter.

Miss Nora Carr, of Atlanta, has gone to Starke, Fla., on a visit to Mrs. S. J. Temple. She will probably spend the winter in the "land of flowers."

Abbeville, S. C., Medium: Mrs. B. J. Wilson, of Atlanta, Ga., is spending a short time with her cousin, A. M. Hill. Her daughter, Miss Mary D. Wilson, a charming and beautiful young lady, and quite a belle at home, also accompanies her.

Ex Governor Sims, of Mississippi, who, with his wife and little son Harry, have been visiting their aunt, Mrs. E. D. McKinley, left for their home in Columbus, Mississippi, on Friday. They have spent the summer traveling and, after a delightful stay at White Sulphur, Va. and other resorts, were much pleased with Atlanta and interested in her progress. Governor Sims and his charming wife are both native Georgians, but he has made Mississippi his home ever since the late war, and several years ago married Miss Lonie Upson, only daughter of Judge F. L. Upson, of Lexington, Ga.

Visiting Here.

Miss Mattie Taylor, of LaGrange, visited Atlanta during the week.

Mrs. T. M. Dean and Miss Augusta Rosser, of Eatonton, are in the city.

Dr. E. V. Cooper, of Tuskegee, Ala., who has been visiting his daughter, Mrs. J. A. Cooper, in this city, has returned home.

Miss Maggie Walthow, of Savannah, who has been spending the summer with her relative, Miss Annie Morrall, Capitol Avenue, has returned home.

Miss Celia Cohn, a charming and bewitching society lady of Cincinnati, is spending a month with her sister, Mrs. Louis Saloshin, at the Collier house, 59½ Whitehall.

Home Again.

Miss Mittie Morris, of this city, has returned from trip north.

Mrs. R. A. Keel has returned to Atlanta, after a long visit to Scottsboro.

Miss Angeline Adams has returned to her home in Atlanta from a visit to Eatenton.

Miss Allie Thompson, who has been spending the summer at Saratoga and in Brooklyn with relatives, will return home Tuesday.

Miss W. Simpson, after a protracted visit to friends in Virginia and in the principal eastern cities, has returned to her home in Atlanta.

Purple and Fine Linen.

Black tulle is to be used extensively this winter at ball dresses.

Bronze slippers, worn with old gold stockings, are popular for house wear.

Crimson is seen on many of the Parisian bonnets, in velvet, ribbon, silk and birds.

Some of the newest handkerchiefs have a narrow rim of flowers embroidered in white or colors above the hem.

Pearl necklaces are finding great favor among young ladies at present. They are not used for the neck, but are twisted about the wrist.

Fall styles in hosiery are very novel and very striking. The opera hose has narrow lengthwise stripes in gay colors, yellow, red or blue, combined with black.

Leaders of fashion are going back to first principles, and black gros grain silks of the richest quality will be the costume selected for the most important occasion, even for full dress. The garniture will be rich lace, jet, and velvet.

As to Conversation.

Let modesty and kind feeling govern your conversation, as other rules of life.

There are two great qualities in conversation—one is, you must originate; the other, you must sympathize.

Steele says: "I would establish but one great general rule in conversation, which is this: That people should not talk to please themselves, but those that hear them.

To converse really well, you must read much; treasure in your memory the pearls of what you read. You must have a quick comprehension, observe passing events, and listen attentively whenever there is an opportunity of acquiring knowledge.

Musical Quavers.

Scalchi will sing in Spain this season.

Rubinstein's latest opera is called "The Parrott."

Gerster has just celebrated her thirty-seventh birthday.

Masini, the tenor, asks $30,000 a month for singing three times a week.

Over a $1,500,000 worth of musical instruments were imported last year.

Twenty five thousand dollars out of $30,000 required has been subscribed in Europe for a Mozart monument.

Stage Silhouettes.

Mme. Modjeska will pass the winter in Poland.

The Abbie Carrington concert company are in Iowa.

Arthur Chase will give up the control of Rhea in December.

Two hundred and fifty theatrical companies are now on the road.

"Peck's Bad Boy" is a play of an agglomeration of practical jokes.

"Captain Mishler" is a New York drama of love, crime, and retribution.

C. D. Hess is now business manager of the Grand opera house in Chicago.

Ford has an opera company of forty persons. Mrs. Zelda Sequin is the prima donna.

John Owens has the business management of the Academy of Music in Charleston, S. C.

Louis McNish has retired from Barlow and Wilson's minstrels and will join Thatcher, Primrose and West.

"May Blossoms" will bloom in Atlanta. It is an enjoyable domestic drama, full of life's ups and downs, a marriage, estrangement, separation and reunion brought about by the artless effort of a little child.

Miss Letitia Fritch exhibits presents received from aged admirers while in Mexico. The Chicago correspondent of Friend's Weekly says that she possesses a number of buildings in her own right in St. Louis.

Cuticura
A POSITIVE CURE
or Every Form of Skin and Blood Disease, from Pimples to Scrofula.
I have had the Psoriasis for nine months. About five months ago I applied to a doctor near Boston, who helped me, but unfortunately I had to leave, but continued taking his medicine for nearly three months, but the disease did not leave. I saw Mr. Carpenter's letter in the Philadelphia Record, and his case perfectly described mine. I tried the CUTICURA REMEDIES, using two bottles RESOLVENT, and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP in proportion, and call myself completely cured.

A FRANTIC APPEAL

FROM BLAINE TO THE PEOPLE OF THE SOUTHERN STATES.

He Claims Kin With West Virginia and Discourses Especial Virtues to Its People—Specimen of Cheap and Schoolboy Oratory—Why Is the South Solid?—Etc.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., October 6.—At G[illegible]ton there was a large meeting. The little mountain town was filled with people from the surrounding country. Mr. Blaine was escorted to a stand, where Hon. John W. Mar[illegible] introduced him to the people. Mr. Blaine said:

"Citizens of West Virginia—As your distinguished chairman has intimated, I am not a stranger to your state. I have known it personally for more than forty years, and I have known this section of it well. I was born on the banks of yonder river, a few miles below the p[illegible] where it enters Pennsylvania, and I do not need be told by me that there was always a unity of feeling among the inhabitants of the Monongahela valley. But I do not see before me the West Virginia which I knew in my boyhood. The West Virginia of forty years ago was comparatively a wilderness. The West Virginia of to-day is a prosperous industrial center in the United States (Applause). West Virginia as an independent commonwealth began her existence during the civil war, and at that day the most liberal estimate of her total property according to enumeration of United States census, did not exceed one hundred millions of dollars. In 1870 the census gave you an aggregate of one hundred and ninety m[illegible]lions, and in 1880 it showed that you possessed capitalized wealth to the amount of three hundred and fifty millions of dollars. From the close of the war to the year 1880 West Virginia had, therefore, gained in wealth the enormous sum of two hundred and fifty millions. You have prosperity well, therefore, under republican administration. [Laughter and cheers.]

Probably some political opponent does me the honor to listen to me, and I would ask him a candid man, what agency was it that nerved the arm of industry to settle mountains and create this wealth in West Virginia? It was a protective tariff and a financial system that gave you good money. (Cheers.) Before the war you never had in circulation in your midst a bill that would pass current five hundred miles from home. You do not to-day have a single piece of bank money circulating in West Virginia that is not as good all around the globe; not a bill that will not pass in the money markets of Europe as well as in New York or Baltimore, so that the man who works for day wages knows when Saturday night comes that he is to be paid in good money. Under a protective tariff your manufactories and your iron industries and the wages of your forests have been brought out and built up, and yet you citizens of West Virginia to say whether you want this to continue or whether you will go back to try free trade. [A voice—no we don't.] I make bold to say with all respect that there is not a democratic statesman on the stump in West Virginia, conspicuous enough to be known to the nation (I speak only of those I know), who advocates a protective tariff—not one. I go further. I do not know a democratic statesman who does not acknowledge that a tariff for protection is constitutional, and therefore as a [illegible] men they are bound to oppose it. The Morrison tariff bill would have struck at the interests of West Virginia in many vital points, and it is an amazing fact that representatives in congress from West Virginia voted for that bill. There is a old adage which I beg to recall to your mind, that "God helps those who help themselves," and if West Virginia is willing to sustain a protective tariff by her vote and influence, she is not not expect it to be sustained for her by others. If she wants the benefit of a protective tariff, she must give to protective tariff the benefit of her support. (Cheers.) I am glad that I am addressing southern people—a community that were slave holders—a community that is made up of those who were masters and those who were slaves.

But I am addressing a slave state no longer. (Cheers.) I am appealing to the new south—and I am appealing to West Virginia not to vote from sectionalism or prejudice—not to keep her eyes to the rear, but to look to the front—to the future. I could be heard I would make the same appeal to the other southern states—to old Virginia, to North Carolina, to Georgia, to Alabama, to Tennessee and to Louisiana. They are all interested in a protective tariff and the question which do they prefer? To gratify prejudice or to promote general prosperity? West Virginia has led the way. She can break this unfortunate and regrettable barrier of the solid south. (Cheers and cries of "we'll do it, we'll do it.") Solid for what? Solid on prejudice, solid on tradition, solid upon doctrines that separate different portions of the union. Here I invite you to join in a movement merely in form, but a union in fact; and to take your part in the solution of the industrial and financial problems of our time. If West Virginia takes that course on the 14th of October she will do much to settle the controversies that now agitate us. The repeal of the protective tariff, according to terms of Morrison bill, would have cost West Virginia a sum of money. Between 1870 and 1880 you gained in this state $100,000,000. Between 1880 and 1890 you will gain much more, with a tariff for protection. But I ask any business man if he believes you can do it with free trade or with the so-called "no, no." Here I close my words of counsel, leaving action to you. I leave you—not as a party influenced by sectional feeling, but as a community broadly national. I leave you as a state allied on one side to Pennsylvania on the other to Ohio (cheers) as much as to Virginia and Kentucky. I leave you as a state that stands in the van of the new south to lead the whole south to join in the great national movement which shall, in fact and in feeling as well as in form, make us a people with one country, one constitution and one destiny. [Cheers.]

BLAINE AT BELLAIRE.

Trying to Obscure Republican Corruption Behind Appeals to Workingmen.

WHEELING, W. Va., October 6.—At Bellaire, Ohio, late Saturday night, after the procession and after the others had spoken, Mr. Blaine made the following speech:

"The question of tariff for protection is primarily of interest to laboring men. The original material that enters into any fabric constitutes a very small element in cost of the fabric. If you take a steamship that cost $2500,000 when she is launched the material in her costs $5,000 and labor $495,000. If you take a ton of pig iron that sells in your market to-day for $20, the material that goes into it does not cost originally over 90 cents; labor costs $19.10. I mention these facts which might be varied indefinitely for illustration in all departments. To show that if tariff for protection is primarily or specially of interest to any one, it is to the laboring man, and if the laboring man will not protect himself with his vote, how can he ask others to do it?"

Mr. Blaine then referred to the wonderful growth of wealth and population in this country during the twenty years from 1860 to 1880, and attributed all the benefits of that period to the policy of protective tariff. In concluding he said:

"Why, look at what has been the effect of simply the Morrison tariff bill. They failed to get it through the house of representatives, even, but they kept the country in a state of fear and agitation, and thus effected injury to the interests of every laboring man and every capitalist in the United States. Do you want to organize, not merely a change in the tariff, for that might be defeated; but do you want to organize perpetual congression[illegible] lation of that question? [No, no.] It is not that matter is in your hands. You have the power to command that it shall be settled. You have the power to join in that contest, and the opportunity will be given to you on the 14th day of October through your right of legal ballots. [Cheers.]

Logan's Forlorn Hope.

CHARLESTOWN, W. Va., October 6.—Gen. John A. Logan arrived here from Huntington at 12 o'clock on his way through the state to every part of the state. Large crowds greeted him along his route. General Logan stopped here and made a speech to a large audience. He left two hours later. He will stop in the towns up the valley and through to the Virginia line. There was much enthusiasm manifested and cannons were fired in honor of the general.

Governor Cleveland Serene.

ALBANY, N. Y., October 6.—Governor Cleveland spent the day as usual attending to the business of his office. Among his visitors were John T. Agnew, of New York, and Barnes and John M. Beckley, of Ri[illegible]
